TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE.

MANY of the proverbial sayings translated in this volume, were collected by Sheref ed dīn Ibn Asad, (شرف الدين ابن اسد) a native of Cairo, who lived, it is said, early in the last century, but never acquired a very high literary reputation. The translator found those Proverbs written upon nine or ten leaves in the common-place book of a sheikh, with whom he was acquainted in this city; but they wanted explanation or commentary. Of those he has omitted a considerable number, many being altogether uninteresting, and others so grossly indelicate that he could not venture to lay them before the public, although it must be acknowledged that they excelled in wit. Several sayings which appear to have been popular in the time of Ibn Asad, are no longer current; and these the translator has marked with an asterisk.

The original collection he has augmented by some hundreds, committed to paper as he heard them quoted in general society or in the bázár. Where the sense of a Proverb did not seem quite clear, he has explained it, or at least noticed the meaning commonly assigned to it, as well as any peculiarity of language wherever the provincial idiom differs from the learned Arabic. In this labour he was assisted by many intelligent Arabs of Cairo. The natives, in general, are so fond of figurative language and of witty allusions and comparisons taken from low life, that these sayings are constantly quoted on every common occasion, and express the tendency or moral of an event much better than could be done by a long or flowery speech. Many of these sayings are rhythmical, and sometimes the rhymes are extremely happy; but the drollery is lost in a plain translation, which has been rendered as literal as possible, and in which the true sense has never been sacrificed to elegance. They are written in the vulgar dialect of Cairo, such as every inhabitant understands and every one uses, except perhaps a few who affect to despise the language of the lower classes. These Proverbs offer a genuine specimen of the Arabic at present spoken in the Egyptian capital, and the same, or very nearly the same, as that used in the towns of the Delta.

These sayings are useful, as they serve to show us how the Arabs judge of men and things, and in this respect it must be acknowledged that many are dictated by wisdom and sagacity. Several Scriptural sayings and maxims of ancient sages will be found here naturalized among Arabs; as well as some Proverbs which have generally been supposed of European origin.

Meidani has collected many sayings that were current among the ancient Arabs at the most brilliant period of their social state and of their language; but the present collection offers to our view a different nation and different manners; it also exhibits in some places an adulterated dialect, and alludes to vices which were probably but little known among the forefathers of the Egyptians. It proves, however, that the language is not by any means so corrupted as various travellers have imagined, and that the principles of virtue and honour, of friendship and true charity, of independence and generosity, are perfectly well known to the modern inhabitants of Egypt, although very few among them take the trouble of regulating their conduct accordingly.

The number of nine hundred and ninety-nine Proverbs might easily have been augmented by one, but the translator refrains from completing the thousand, adopting here a notion prevalent among Arabs, that even numbers are unlucky, and that any thing perfect in its quantity is particularly affected by the evil eye. He does not pretend to possess such a thorough knowledge of the learned Arabic as would have enabled him to indicate every instance of discrepancy between the language of these popular sayings and that used by the ancient Arabian writers. His long residence at Cairo rendered the vulgar idiom of its inhabitants familiar to him ; and knowing how few specimens of that idiom have hitherto been published, he flatters himself with the hope that this collection may interest and gratify the Orientalist, and that his explanations will be regarded as the hasty work of a traveller subject to numerous inconveniences, and who may, in some cases, have been deceived by erroneous or defective information, and not criticised as the elaborate treatise of a learned Arabic scholar or grammarian, surrounded by all the means of making his composition perfect.

CAIRO, 25th of March, 1817.

NOTE OF THE EDITOR.

To Burckhardt's short Preface a few lines must here be added. That accomplished traveller has sufficiently explained his motives for withholding from publication several Proverbs which had found a place in his original collection. It seems necessary that the Editor should account why this volume does not contain even so many as Burckhardt evidently intended to publish (nine hundred and ninety-nine). The numerical series is interrupted in various parts of the manuscript, not by any accidental injury, mutilation, or loss of leaves, but by chasms, which amount in some instances to whole decades of Proverbs; the most considerable deficiency occurring where (in the middle of a page) immediately after No. 516 follows No. 577. These omissions may not unreasonably be supposed to have arisen from the writer's mistake of one figure for another; in fact the 1 of No. 516 so much resembles a 7, (being nearly joined to the 5 by a stroke of the pen at its upper part,) that it might easily deceive the eye. Some allowance must also be made for the effect of those inconvenient circumstances to which our ingenious traveller has above alluded. Under whatever circumstances of difficulty, danger, or inconvenience, he may have collected and explained these Proverbs, his work offers a variety of curious and original information respecting the manners, customs, and opinions of an extraordinary people; while his philological remarks must prove highly useful and interesting to all who are desirous of understanding, with critical accuracy, the modern Arabic dialect used at Cairo.

In the composition of this work, as of his volumes already published, he adopted the language of our country, and generally with sufficient correctness; it has been, however, in some places, necessary to substitute an English for a foreign idiom, Burckhardt's meaning being on all occasions most scrupulously preserved; even where his translation of certain terms or phrases (which the Arabic scholar will soon discover) appeared more literal than decent, it has been endeavoured by circumlocution to express the sense without offending delicacy. These and the omission of a few Proverbs (found to agree most exactly both in words and signification with others given under preceding numbers) constitute the only liberties which have been assumed by the Editor.

ARABIC PROVERBS OF THE MODERN EGYPTIANS.

حرف الالف

No. 1.

الف ددق ولا سلام عليك

A thousand raps at the door, but no salute or invitation from within.

This is said of a person's fruitless endeavours to become intimate with another.

2.

الف تقا ولا تقاي

(Let them strike or slap) a thousand necks, but not mine.

Among the Arabs it is usual to strike the neck (تقا) and not the ears. A blow on the neck is considered a much greater affront than a slap on the face. Not only the neck, but a blow struck upon the neck, is expressed in the Egyptian dialect by تعا. Thus "I struck him a blow on his neck," (ضربتہ تعا) is exactly equivalent in its meaning to the English phrase, "I boxed his ears."

B

3.

الف كركي في اجو ما تعوض عصفور في الكف

A thousand cranes in the air are not worth one sparrow in the fist.

The crane كركي is a bird common in the Delta, particularly about the Lake of Menzaleh. كف properly signifies the "hand," or "palm of the hand;" but in Egypt is generally used for the "fist."

4.

اذا كان القمر معك لا تبالي بالنجوم

If the moon be with thee, thou needest not to care about the stars.

اذا كان معك نحس لا تسيمه ينجيك انحس منه

If a worthless fellow be with thee, do not let him go, or else one worse will come to thee.

The general meaning is, that we should bear present ills rather than, by endeavouring to remove them, expose ourselves to greater. This saying is often quoted with respect to servants, whose dishonesty and insolence are subjects of universal complaint throughout Egypt. The word يسب in common acceptation signifies "to leave a thing, to let it go out of one's hands." The word نحس is used in Egypt to express a low, disorderly, unprincipled character—a base, worthless fellow.

إذا كانت العمايم تشتكي الغسة ايش يكون حال الألبسة

If the turbans complain of a slight wind, what must be the state of the inner drawers ?

This proverb is quoted when the citizens of Cairo murmur at oppression, the peasants having much greater reason for being discontented. الغسة flatus, —البسة—اي شي in the Egyptian dialect used for plural of لباس, drawers worn under the great trowsers.

إذا كان زوجي راضي ايش فضول القاضي

If my husband consent, why should the kadhys's interference be necessary.

This means in general that when two parties who have contended agree to be reconciled, the arbitration of a third person is not requisite. But the saying more particularly alludes to divorces, which in many cases are determined by the kadhys. فضول in the Egyptian dialect, signifies—the meddling, officious interference of a third person.

إذا نسيت الحمد تصلي بایش

If thou forgettest to say "Praise be to God," in what other words wilt thou pray?

This is addressed to persons who neglect the principal object or part of their business, and execute only that which is the least important. الحمد means the expression الحمد لله, which commences the Fateha, or first chapter of the Koran, and should be recited in every prayer. بایش in the Egyptian dialect for بای شي. The Egyptians always put this after the verb in interrogations, as تصلي بایش—whilst the Syrians invariably place it before, and say بایش تصلي.

إذا کرهک جارک غیر باب دارک

If thy neighbour dislike thee, change the gate of thy house.

The intimacy with neighbours is much greater in the East than in Europe ; and the repose of a family often depends upon the harmony subsisting between it and those who occupy the adjoining house.

10.

إذا حلق جارک بل انت

If thy neighbour shaves (somebody), do thou soak (the head of the person whom he shaves).

Always endeavour to act agreeably to the wishes of thy neighbour. يبل to wet, meaning here to wet the head with a lather of soap before the application of a razor.

إذا أراد ربنا هلاك نملة انبت لها اجنحة

If God proposes the destruction of an ant, he allows wings to grow upon her.

The sudden elevation of persons to stations above their means or capacities, may often cause their ruin.

12.

إذا رايت اعور عبر اقلب حجر

If thou seest a one-eyed person pass by, turn up a stone.

The people of Cairo turn up a stone or break a water-jar behind the back of any person whom they dislike, just on his leaving them, hoping thereby to prevent his return; this is a kind of incantation. The term one-eyed here expresses a person disagreeable on any account. The Arabs regard a one-eyed man as of bad omen (شوم), and nobody wishes to meet him.

إذا رايت حيط مايل هرول من تحتها

If thou seest a wall inclining, run from under it.

Fly from him whose power is tottering, or whom dangers threaten. In the Egyptian dialect حيط is used for حائط.

14.

إذا كثرت الألوان أعرف أنها من بيوت الجيران

If the dishes increase in number, it becomes known that they are from the houses of neighbours.

In the East, neighbours frequently supply the wants of their friend's kitchen on occasion of family feasts. This saying implies that when a person makes too expensive an entertainment, it is evident that he has borrowed from others. لون (in the plural الألوان) means not only "a colour," but, among the Egyptians, a dish of dressed victuals.

إذا كثرت النواتية غرقت الركب

If the sailors become too numerous, the ship sinks.

كثرت instead of كثرت. The ث is seldom pronounced in Egypt.

16.

إذا حبتك حية اطوق بها

If a serpent love thee, wear him as a necklace.

If dangerous people show affection towards thee, court their friendship by the most polite attention.

17.

إذا انكسر الجمّل حمل حمل حمار

If thy camel break down, put on an ass-load.

Suit thy business to thy circumstances.

18.

إذا كان الكفن مخلق و الغاسل أعور و الدكة مكسورة و الأرض سبخة
يكون الميت من أهل جهنم

If the winding-sheet be ragged, and the corpse-washer one-eyed, and the bier broken, and the burial-ground a saltish soil, then truly the deceased must belong to the inhabitants of hell.

If everything in a person's business goes wrong, he must be totally ruined at last. دكة is properly a stand or frame on which the coffin rests before it is removed to the grave.

إذا بليت بالشحاة دق الابواب الكبار

If mendicity should unfortunately be thy lot, knock at the large gates only.

Ask assistance from those only who have the power of helping thee.

20.

إذا كان البصل يهلل له فالسكر ايش نقول له

If an onion causes his loud rejoicings, what then shall we say to sugar?

Said of people who bestow admiration upon trifling objects.

إذا سموك حصاد شرشر منجلک

If they call thee reaper, whet thy scythe.

Endeavour, even by mere appearances, to convince people that thou deservest the reputation that thou enjoyest.

22.

إذا حضر الماء بطل التيمم

If water is present for ablution, the use of sand is discontinued.

Affluence renders unnecessary what is practised during poverty. التيمم is the ablution with sand which the Turkish law prescribes when water cannot be procured.

إذا حضرت الملائكة غابت الشياطين

When the angels present themselves, the devils abscond.

24.

إذا هب الهوي دخل دخل الشقوق

If the wind blows, it enters at every crevice.

A lucky person is fortunate in the most trifling affair. شقوق plural of شق, a fissure in the wall.

25.

إذا كان في إيدك دهن امسحه فن اقرب الناس اليك

If there be grease on thy hand, rub it off at thy nearest friends.

Let your own kindred, and not strangers, share in your superfluities, or the fragments from your table. ايد is used at Cairo for يد—and pronounced there eed, not yed, as it ought to be.

26.

إذا رأيته يسبّ أعلم أنه يحبه

If thou seest him reproaching and swearing at him, know that he loves him.

De amatoribus dicitur. بسبّ is commonly used at Cairo for reviling, calling opprobrious names, or swearing at a person.

27.*

إذا جا الماء طوفان اجعل ابنك تحت رجليك

If the water come like a deluge, place thy son under thy feet.

Save thyself, even at the expense of thy nearest kindred or friends—a selfish principle very general in the Levant. According to Moslim tradition, when the deluge came and the rebel sons of Noah felt the water approach their ankles, they took their little children in their arms; when the water rose higher, they placed them upon their shoulders, then upon their heads; but at last, when the flood reached to their own mouths, they put the children under their feet, endeavouring to keep their own heads above the water.

28.*

اللس العيار ما يسرق من حارته شيء

The thief who understands his business does not steal from his own quarter (of the town).

العيار, able, clever, expert.

29.

آخر الليل تسمع العياط

At the close of the night the cries are heard.

This saying is addressed to persons exulting in good fortune, to warn them of the final issue. The night may have passed tranquilly, but at the end affrays often happen, occasioned either by drunkards, profligates coming from the houses of public women, or by robbers, who generally commit depredations at that time, when they suppose the inhabitants to be asleep.

آخر الطب الكي

The ultimate remedy is a cautery.

If nothing else will avail, violent measures must be at last adopted.

31.

العرس عرس ابونا و الناس يضاربونا

The nuptials are the nuptials of our father, yet the people fight with us.

Those who have the strongest claim find themselves dispossessed of the advantage by others. This saying alludes to a crowd of fellows who have assembled at a nuptial entertainment, but beat and displace the bridegroom's children, to make room for themselves.

الحبلة الشتهه و المرضعة اكلته

The pregnant woman longed for it, but the nurse ate it.

This proverb resembles in sense that immediately preceding. The whims of pregnant women are treated with indulgence in the East as well as in Europe.

33.

الطاحان ياخذ كف بكف و ربنا ياخذ بغل ببغل

The miller takes (steals) handful by handful, but the Lord takes (sums up his reckoning) mule (load) by mule (load).

ياخذ in Egypt used for ياخذ—the ن being generally pronounced as د.

34.

الحجامة بالغاس و لا الحاجة لناس

Rather be scarified with an axe than require favours from others.

الحاجة for الاحتياج. It might likewise mean a thing, or شي (as hereafter remarked), and so understood would signify, "better to be scarified with an axe than to owe or be indebted to others for anything." الحجامة means cupping, also to make mere scarifications on the forehead or legs—a common practice in the Levant. Among the Bedouins, a father threatening his son, says, اذا فعلته نحاجبك "if you do so we shall cup (or scarify) you."

35.

الرئيس يحبك امسح يدك في القلع

The captain (of the ship) loves thee, wipe thy hand on the sail.

He who is favoured by government may do any thing with impunity.

انا احب حماتي و احب عند انفي نفسي

(Yes)—I like my mother-in-law, and I like also that she should make a (disgusting) smell under my nose (crepitum reddendo).

This refers to a silly, obstinate fellow, who persists in longing for what offends others. In the East it is generally supposed that a mother-in-law cannot long be on good terms with the son-in-law, and her name is commonly used as a term expressing "disagreeable kindred." Here is to be understood
واحِب انها عند

العب مع العبد يوريك شقه

Play with a slave, he will show to thee his hinder parts.

Low people become insolent if you admit them to familiarity. شق is equivalent to طيز—or rather to خرق الطيز

اعور وقعت في عينه الصالحة قشة قال الله
بمسيكم بالخير

A splinter entered the sound eye of a one-eyed person.

"I wish you good night," said he.

He fancied that night had arrived. This refers to those who judge the world merely by their own sensations, and suppose that every one must feel as they do. قشة in the Egyptian dialect, signifies any small piece of wood, straw, &c.

احدب ويشقلب

He is hump-backed, yet whirls about.

يشقلب properly expresses those "tours de force" practised by a rope dancer in wheeling round his whole body with the head forwards.

40.

اعمى ويشالق

He is blind, and still ogles the women.

يشالق علي النساء or يتشالق is commonly used at Cairo to describe the glances which a man passing in the street directs towards the shutters, behind which the women sit.

الكلام لك يا جارة ألا أنت حمارة

It is to thee I speak, my (fair) neighbour; but truly thou art an ass.

This is said of dull persons, unable to comprehend a slight hint. A man conversing with his own wife, was desirous of giving a hint to his neighbour's wife, of whom he was the gallant, and who overheard the conversation; but she did not understand him, and he in a rage used the words above quoted.

42.

ان جات الدادة احن من الوالدة دي حنية فاسدة

If the midwife happen to have more commiseration (for the child) than the mother, that is a corrupt feeling.

The humane intentions of inferior officers are of little avail, if the spirit of government be unmerciful. الدادة the midwife. دي used in Egypt for هذي. حنية may likewise be translated "affection."

43.*

ايش ما طبخت العمشة لزوجها بيتعشا

Whatever the half-blind wife cooks for her husband, he sups on it.

Custom reconciles us to bad living. عيش half-blind, sore-eyed. (The Egyptians frequently use the imprecation, “blindness to thy eyes,” عَمَشَ فِي عَيْنِكَ.) The ب of يَمْتَعِشَا is according to the Egyptian dialect, and often prefixed to verbs; but still more commonly in Syria than in Egypt.

44*.

اللي في الدست تطلعه المغرفة

What is in the cauldron is taken out with the kitchen spoon.

Every affair requires its own peculiar treatment, and its own people to bring it to a conclusion: also, to obtain information, the proper mode must be adopted. اللي used in Egypt for الذي. يطلع has many significations; it here means “to take out.” المغرفة is the great kitchen ladle or wooden spoon.

45.

الباطل ما له رجلين

The lazy person has no legs.

The Egyptians pronounce لَه as if it were written لُو, instead of saying lahoo.

46.

الجنائز حامية والميت كلب

The burial is attended by crowds of people, the deceased is—a dog.

Alluding to great honours bestowed on persons not worthy of them. حامية signifies a burial or funeral when it is “hot;” i.e., attended by multitudes.

العِب بالمقصُوص حتَّى يَجبِكَ الدِّوَانِي

Play with false coin until thou gettest a dīwāny.

المقصُوص is the old clipped silver or copper coin, likewise false coin. The Egyptians more generally use زغل or زيف to express false money. Dīwāny is the same as pārā. To gain, begin humbly.

48.

الفرخ الناجب من البيضة يبان

The fine pullet shows its excellence from the egg.

The pullets most likely to thrive are those which cry from the very egg. This is likewise expressed by the saying

الكتكوت الناصح من البيضة يصيح

The words كتكوت and فرخ are synonymous.

49.*

الدنيا مرآة اوريها توريك

The world is a mirror; show thyself in it, and it will reflect thy image.

We may also translate thus: "show thyself in it (i.e., be frank with the people), and it will let thee see its image" (i.e., people will be frank with thee). This meaning would be more clearly expressed by the words اوريها نفسك توريك نفسها. In the Egyptian dialect مرآة is used for امرأة.

50.

الليلة النيرة من العصر بيّنة

From the aszer (or afternoon) it appears whether the night will be clear.

This (like No. 48) means that a person gives indications of his future virtues from early youth. بيّنة is much used among the Egyptians for باينة.

51.

اتعمم بأسغوط ولا تنسي الشروط

Tie a turban of straw round thy head, but do not forget thy engagements.

Play the fool as much as thou wilt, but observe thy promises and engagements. أسغوط ribbands of straw from which baskets are made. Idiots fasten them like turbans about their heads. يتعمم signifies "to tie a turban."

52.

المستعجل و البطي عند المعدية يلتقي

The hasty and the tardy meet at the ferry.

Extremes often meet: معدية a ferry-boat. The ferries wait a long time on the banks of the Nile, until the complement of passengers be full.

53.

الاسم لطوبة و الفعايل لامشبر

Tooba bears the name, but the deeds belong to Emshyr.

This alludes to the common saying, برد طوبة, "the cold of the Tooba," which in Egypt is applied to any considerable degree of cold. Tooba is the Coptic month comprehending the greater part of January: but the coldest month in Egypt, although it has not the character of being so, is Emshyr, the month next after Tooba.

54.

اشتھینا علي دي الطلق يجي غلام

From the mother's efforts in labour, we expected the birth of a male child.

“Parturiunt montes, nascitur ridiculus mus.” Sons are much more desired than daughters throughout the East. طلق “the labour of a woman in child-bed.”

55.*

أمل بحبة و حاسب البطال

Work (were it only) for a single grain, and reckon up the profits of him who does nothing.

ولا حبة often means “a trifle.” Thus it is said, ولا حبة “not even the smallest trifle.”

56.

ان لقيتما قطع ايزارها قال الدورة علي لم الشمل

If thou find her, cut her veil in two. “The object is now to find the chance of meeting her,” he replied.

It is not sufficient to form projects, circumstances must favour us in executing them. ايزار a woman's veil, generally of black silk or cotton. قال is here put for قال الغايل. In the Egyptian dialect دورة means "now, for once, above all." دوري "in my turn." لم الشمل literally, "the gathering together what is separated;" or as here, "to cause or find a meeting." The expression الدورة علي لم الشمل often signifies nothing more than "if, if!"

57.

انا اخبر بشمس بلدي

I best know the sun of my own country.

Every one knows best his own affairs, and those interested in them.

58.

الزلاية محرمة علي الكلاب

The Zalabye is (a dish) forbidden to the dogs.

The higher classes only can enjoy certain pleasures. زلاية are round cakes made of flour, butter, and sugar; not much in fashion of late at Cairo.

المحتاج اخو القرنان

The needy is the brother of the cuckold.

The needy husband connives at the dishonourable earnings of his unfaithful wife. The term قرنان (cuckold) is no longer used at Cairo. Cuckolds and procurers are generally comprised under the same appellation معرس, which is the common expression of insult among the Egyptians, and heard on every occasion. Equivalent to معرس are the words قواد and دماغ.

الخنفسة في عين امها مليحة

The beetle is a beauty in the eyes of its mother.

On the infatuation of parents. The beetle (خنفسة) is cited by the present Egyptians as remarkable for its ugliness. They use مليح in the sense of "handsome."

61.

العمل بالزيت ولا القعاد في البيت

Work, though thy gain be merely the oil, rather than sit (idle) at home.

This alludes to the oil with which lamps are lighted, and which costs each family at least two paras every night. To express that a man is reduced to abject poverty, the Egyptians say, "he has not as much as would pay for the oil." ما عنده حق الزيت

الفايدة في الخرا ولا الغرامة في المسك

Gain upon dirt rather than loss upon musk.

Endeavour to gain in low pursuits rather than lose in brilliant concerns. غرامة is used in Egypt to signify "loss;" but the term خسارة is more frequently employed.

63.

ان سلمت الدار من سعيد مايجي احد من بعيد

If the house be relieved from (the presence of) Sayd, no other will come from afar.

This relates in general to importunate and intruding visitors. Sayd was one of those parasites (called طفيل) who in former times were established as a regular corporation at Cairo, and became a plague to all who gave entertainments. They have their chief or sheikh, and obtruded their company at every private feast, unless they were induced by a present to depart from the house.

العاقل من غيرة والمجنون من لكزة

The wise with a wink, the fool with a kick (are taught to understand).

65.

This proverb chiefly refers to the dancing girls, who, when they are brought for the amusement of company, pay attention particularly to those whom they soon discover to be the most inclined towards them.

ابليس ما يخرّب بيته

The devil does not destroy his (own) house.

68.

ابليس يعرف ربه لكن يتخابث

The devil knows his Lord, but still practises evil.

On a person who understands the precepts of religion, but never acts according to them. In the Egyptian dialect, يتخابث for يتخابث "to practise foul deeds," "to intrigue," or "embroil."

69.

السلطان ينشتم في غيبته

The Sultan is reviled in his absence (only).

70.

البيت لنا والحديث لنا

To us belong the house, and the talking (therein).

This expresses that we are here sole masters, or that it is our own affair exclusively. حديث for حديث.

الغلبة الجوادة ما تريد لها قوادة

The public woman who is liberal (of her favours), does not wish for a procuress.

A thorough scoundrel wants no inducement to bad actions. قوادة a procuress. قاحبة commonly used in Egypt for an unchaste female or prostitute.

اهل العرس يشتهوا المرق

The people concerned in the nuptials long for the broth.

Those nearest to wealth are often prevented from enjoying it; the great enjoy the least. In this proverb it is supposed that the guests devour all the meat of the nuptial feast, leaving the members of the family to long even for the broth.

73.

اخلط الهم بالزيبية

Mingle thy sorrow with Zebybe.

Drown your griefs in pleasures. زيبية is a preparation from the flower of hemp, opium, and honey, excessively intoxicating. It is used among the lower classes and peasants. In Hedjaz this flower of hemp is mixed with raisins (called Zebyb) and tobacco, and is smoked in the Persian pipe; from which mixture the name of Zebybe has probably been derived.

74.

أما بالجمال أو بالجمال أو بصاحب الجمال

This expresses that if a person be once unlucky, he is unfortunate in every thing, whether with respect to his family or his business.

75.*

أوقد شمعة وفتش جمعة تلتقي شي قدر الودعة

Light a candle; search for a whole week; thou wilt find something worth a shell.

On fruitless or childish exertions. ودعة are small white shells brought from the Red Sea, which serve as playthings for children, and as counters in the game of mangal. تلتقي used in Egypt for تلقي

76.*

العصفور يتغلي و الصياد يتغلي

The little bird picks its breast, while the sportsman sets his net.

The word عصفور, properly a sparrow, is often used to express any small bird. يتغلي in the original sense means to pick the vermin off the head or body of a child. The birds in performing that operation upon themselves always appear to be much pleased. In Egypt it is said of a person يغال يتغلي to express that he is in a thoughtless state of security or happy leisure. (غمال stands for يعمل "he does;" and is an auxiliary verb in constant use.) يتغلي properly signifying “to fry a piece of meat in the pan;” here means, “to turn the ends of the net-strings in the sportsman’s hand, as meat is turned with a spoon in the frying-pan.”

الوحدة و لا القرين السوء

To live single rather than have ill-natured companions.

78.*

احتاجوا لليهودي قال اليوم عيدي

They stood in need of the Jew (to assist them)—this day, said he, is my feast-day.

Addressed to persons unwilling to serve or oblige.

الف عشيق و لا مستحل

A thousand lovers rather than one Mostahel.

Many lovers or gallants cause less shame to a woman than one Mostahel. According to the Moslim law a person who has once divorced his wife cannot re-marry her, until she has been married to some other man who becomes her legitimate husband, cohabits with her for one night, and divorces her the next morning; after which the first husband may again possess her as his wife. Such cases are of frequent occurrence—as men in the haste of anger often divorce their wives by the simple expression طلقت—which cannot be retracted. In order to regain his wife a man hires (at no inconsiderable rate) some peasant, whom he chooses from the ugliest that can be found in the streets; but who must engage effectually to consummate the nuptials. A temporary husband of this kind is called Mostahel, and is generally most disgusting to the wife.

اطمع من اشعب

(He is) more greedy than Ashab.

98.

اكذب من مَسِيلَمَة

A greater liar than Moseylama.

These two sayings relate to Ashab and Moseylama, ancient Arabs (the latter a false prophet) remarkable for the vices here imputed to them. These personages are noticed in the following fine verses :—

و وعدتني حتي حسبك صادقاً
فجعلت من طمع اجيه و اذهب
فاذا حضرت انا و انت بمجلس
قالوا مسيلة و هذا اشعب

*Thou gavest me thy pledge so that I believed it to be true.
In my greedy hopes I went (to thy abode) and turned back.
If in society thou and I should meet,
People will say, "here is Moseylama—and that is Ashab."*

99.

اتبع الكذاب لباب الدار

الغندرة المخفية التكة و الطاقية

Gay or expensive fashions (adopted but) concealed consist in the Tikke and the Tâkkye.

Said of hypocrites or timid persons who declaim against gay fashions, but secretly indulge in them. El Tikke is a sash of silk or muslin, often embroidered, with which the trowsers of men and women are closely tied about the loins, while it remains hidden under the garments. El Tákye signifies a white cambric bonnet or cap, frequently embroidered, that is worn close to the head under the red bonnet or Tarbosh. In the Egyptian dialect الغندرة means "high gaiety," "fashion," "liberality," "heartiness," "jollity." The words غندور and غندورة are very common; being applied also to low people, who in their station and among their own acquaintances affect to be smart and dashing. Those who do not wish or who fear to make themselves too conspicuous by an open display of gay fashions, console themselves by having these two hidden articles of costly materials and expensive workmanship. Both the Tikke and the Tákye are among the first tokens of affection sent by a lady to her lover. The Tikke affords subject for many jokes in gay conversation.

ایش افترک لک یا بصله مع کل عضة دمة

117.*

الحرّ حرّ و لو مسّه الضرّ

An honourable man is honourable, even though mishaps should befall him.

حرّ signifies here “virtuous,” or “honourable,” as above (in No. 104). Of this proverb the pronunciation at Cairo is as follows:—

El horr horr

Wa low mессoo eddorr,

the ow in low having the sound of ow in the English word owl.

118.*

المفرط أولي بالخسارة

The inconsiderate is the first to lose (or nearest to loss).

Some robbers attacked a house, and the owner was forced to give them a hundred pieces of coin ; but these being all base money, the robbers were detected in the bázár, where they went to make purchases. One of them on his way to the scaffold, passed by the house of the person robbed, and reproached him for his cunning ; but the man replied, انت المفرط “thou art the inconsiderate person :” which words gave origin to this proverb. There is a common phrase at Cairo, فرطت في الشيء الغولانه, “I have foolishly or inconsiderately lost such a thing.” The people of Upper Egypt use the word وذر in the same sense—thus, انا وذرت الشيء—this is probably a corruption of the verb وذر or يذر.

A saying derived from the game of chess.

146.

بين حانا و بانا ضاعت الحانا

Between Háná and Báná our beards were lost.

This proverb owes its origin to a story resembling one which La Fontaine has related. Háná and Báná were the wives of an elderly man—one plucked out his grey hairs, the other his black, and so left him without any. In Egypt there are other terms, like Háná and Báná, used merely because they sound almost alike: thus “he went to Khirt Birt” (خرت برت), which means that he travelled upon a foolish errand; or “he went to Hersh Mersh” (خرش مرش), implying that he did not succeed in his business, or else that he was placed in a state of mortification or disgrace, which might be expressed by the English saying, “he was sent to Coventry.” (Other words without any literal signification used in this manner, will occur hereafter.) It may here be remarked that many facetious stories long current in Europe, are of Arabian origin.

بكي ادم علي فراق الجنة

(Like) the lamentation of Adam on his departure or separation from Paradise.

This is said of unavailing grief, chiefly of lamentation for the deceased.

(Like) a hawk over a scare-crow (i.e., flying about it).

To designate a person of meddling disposition, who never remains a moment quiet. فغاز is a particular sort of scare-crow, made of thin pieces of wood, and used in the gardens about Cairo.

حرف التاء

ترك الذنب ولا طلب المغفرة

He left off sinning, but never asked forgiveness.

Said in allusion to those who think it sufficient if they discontinue their bad actions, but never make atonement or solicit pardon for those they have already committed.

156.

تابت القاحبة ليلة قالت ولا والي يمسك القحاب

A harlot repented for one night. "Is there no police officer," she exclaimed, "to take up or lay hold of harlots?"

Those who have been sinners themselves are often the least indulgent towards others; and on the slightest repentance they claim the privilege of rigid virtue. قاحبة (قحاب plural) the term used at Cairo to express a harlot or public woman. ولا is an exclamation. والي the chief police officer at Cairo. He is also entitled exclusively "El Aga."

تعالوا في دي الرجمة نظاهر القليط

Come, let us circumcise the kalyt in this crowd.

A proverb ironically expressing that this is not the proper time or place for a business in question. قليط is a person suffering from certain tumours which sometimes affect even children at Cairo; and which would render the operation of circumcision extremely tedious and troublesome. Kalyt among the vulgar is a nickname frequently applied.

تعالى بلا دعوة اتعدي علي دي الفروة

Come, (my dear,) without any (more) quarrelling, sit down upon this pelisse.

Said in ridicule of the means employed by a husband to coax his wife into good humour. دي هذي In the Egyptian dialect دعوة signifies "complaint," "quarrel." To spread a pelisse that another may sit upon it is a mark of great respect and attention.

تموت الحداية و عينها في الخطف

The falcon dies and his eye is (still) upon the seizure (of his prey).

The tyrant continues a tyrant to his last breath. حداية an ash-grey falcon of the smaller species, common throughout Egypt and Syria. الخطف the action of seizing or carrying off prey. The verb خطف is constantly employed to express the carrying off plunder by soldiers from peasants and shopkeepers.

تطلق النار و تصيح الحريق

Thou kindlest the flame, and criest "fire."

161.

تكون نار تصبح رماد

It may be a fire ; on the morrow it will be ashes.

Violent passions easily subside,

162.

تاخذ من الحافي نعله

Thou takest from the sore-footed his sandal.

Thou ruinest the man completely. حافي means not only "bare-footed," but one who has the sole of his foot sore from walking.

163.

تبوس الحريف تغلق اسنانه

Thou kissest thy lover, and tearest out his teeth.

On the greediness of bad women. الحريف properly means "a rival;" but in Egypt is generally used for "a lover;" it signifies also at Cairo a partner at the chess or backgammon board.

164.

تقرأ الزبور علي اهل القبور

Thou readest the Psalms to the inhabitants of the tombs.

Thou doest what nobody else does. The Psalms are seldom read by Moslims, because they assert that the Christians have interpolated them; yet they acknowledge that David was inspired by heaven when he composed and sung them. Nobody thinks, however, of reading or reciting to the dead.

تمسكنوا حتي تمكّنوا

They behaved like poor honest people until they were firmly established.

On the artful system of Eastern governors. تمسكنوا from the word مسكين which means not only "poor" or "humble," but also "honest;" a sense probably arising from the circumstance that in Eastern countries poor people only are honest. It sometimes implies likewise a reproach of stupidity; thus راجل مسكين "a poor, honest fool," and perhaps for a reason similar to the former; because here no one is ever blamed for cheating or deceiving others, but for allowing himself to be cheated. Few who have talents and cunning condescend to be honest; so that honesty is rather depreciated, or found only among poor fools.

تبييض بيض مدور و تطلب فرايج هندية

He lays round eggs and asks for young turkeys (to proceed from them).

On unreasonable expectations. The turkey egg is oval, while the pigeon egg (here meant) is nearly round.

167.

تضارب الريح و البحر قالت المراكب دي نوبة وقعت علينا

Wind and sea combat—"this time," said the ships, "we shall have the worst of it."

When two rivals contend for the government, the subjects are most to be pitied. نوبة in the Egyptian dialect means "for once," "this time." نوبة وقعت علينا "for once it has fallen upon us;" i.e., the misfortune. There is also a saying نوبة جت علينا "for once or this time it has come upon us," (i.e., the goodhap,) or "we shall be gainers." جت used in Egypt for جات

تجري الرياح بما لا يشتهي السفان

The wind blows as the sailors do not wish.

On untoward circumstances in general. اجري "to run;" it implies also any other kind of rapid motion.

169.

تحت الكسا تيس

Under this (fine) apparel a he-goat (is hidden).

A he-goat (تيس) is, among Arabs, the emblem of a stupid clown. اسكت يا تيس "be silent, thou goat," is a phrase often heard in the bázárs.

170.

تاج المروءة التواضع

The crown of a good disposition is humility.

مروءة in the Egyptian dialect does not merely signify what belongs to the مَرءٌ—what is manly, but in general "good disposition," "kindness," "zeal." It is said of a person صاحب مروءة "who likes to be serviceable to others," "who is honestly zealous in his business." (ما له شي مروءة) مالوش مروءة "a cold egotist."

 حرف الثا

171.

ثوب العارية ما يدفي

A borrowed cloak does not keep one warm.We best enjoy what is our own property.

172.

ثور الحَرْث ما يَتَكَمَّم

The ox that ploughs is not to be muzzled.

This was a precept of the Jewish law. See Deuteronomy xxv, 4. We must necessarily trust to those whom we employ in any business. يَتَكَمَّم comes from كَمَامَة a muzzle made of ropes, closely tied to the mouths of oxen, camels, and other cattle, to prevent their grazing in the fields of strangers in passing along the road; for there are not in Egypt any inclosures.

ثَلَاثَةٌ إِذَا اتَّفَقُوا عَلَيَّ بَلَدٍ أَخْرَبُوهَا

Three (persons) if they unite against a town will ruin it.

The smallest number of evil-disposed persons, if well united, can work considerable mischief.

تُوبُهُ مَمْخَرَقٌ مِنْ أَيِّ مَكَانٍ اشْتَهَى يَطْلُعُ يَدُهُ

His gown is full of holes; he thrusts out his hand at whatever place he likes.

Poverty is sometimes an advantage, as it insures freedom of action. ثُوبُهُ for تُوْبُهُ 175.*

ثُعْبَانٌ عَلَيَّ قُرْصٍ جِلَّةٍ عَايِمٌ فِي بَرَكَةٍ قَذَرَ قَالَ مَا لَدِي الْبَرَكَةُ
الْمُنْتَنَةِ إِلَّا دِي الشَّخْتُورِ الْخَرَا وَهَذَا الْمُنْفَرَجُ الْقَذَرُ

A serpent upon a dung-cake was swimming in a dirty pond. Some one said, (indeed,) "nothing suits this stinking pond better than this ship of dirt and this filthy spectator" (i.e., the serpent).

لَهْذِي or اَلِي هَذي for لَدي The dried cakes of cattle-dung are called جَلَّة—used as fuel in the East. A common term for "serpent" in Egypt is حَيَّة—a great serpent is called ثَعْبَان—and this name is likewise given to the eel.

حرف التَّجِيم

جور الترك و لا عدل العرب

The oppression of Turks, rather than the justice of Arabs.

By the term Arabs are here meant the Bedouins, who, in the Mammelouk times, most grievously oppressed the open country of Egypt. The Bedouins themselves often call their nation exclusively "Arab," a term they use more frequently than "Bedou;," and all other Arabians, who are not of Arab tribes, they distinguish by the appellation of Hadhary or Fellah, which with them are terms of reproach or contempt.

جور القط و لا عدل الغار

The tyranny of the cat, rather (or is better) than the justice of the mouse.

The mouse bears a much worse character in the East than in the West ; “wily, insidious, rapacious,” are the gentlest epithets applied to her. Mice are certainly a great nuisance in Egypt, where the open country (as well as every town) abounds with them to such a degree, that I have known instances of families being actually driven from their homes by the numbers and rapaciousness of the mice and rats, that spared neither victuals nor furniture. جور signifies “unjust, violent, oppressive behaviour.”

جيت ادعي عليه رايت الحيط مايل عليه

I came to utter an imprecation against him, and found the wall inclining over him.

It is unnecessary to revile a person who is already crushed by universal opprobrium. مايل عليه “inclining over him,” “ready to fall upon him.”

179.

جواب الخس علي طرف لسانه

The fool has his answer on the edge of his tongue.

The fool answers without reflection, whatever comes first into his mind. خس here means “a fool,” not merely "vile or bad." The following verse is quoted on the same subject :

لسان العاقل في قلبه و قلب الاحمق في فمه

*The tongue of the wise is in his heart,
The heart of the fool is in his mouth.*

جواب الاحمق السكات عنه

Silence is the (best) answer to the stupid.

السكات عنه means likewise "to leave him alone." "leave him alone" is a common expression, signifying "neither speak to him nor meddle with him."

181.

جا عند الزنادقة يكفر

He came to the impious to blaspheme.

He did what was superfluous, because all his companions did the same. With a similar meaning the Arabs say تحصيل حاصل "a (second) receipt for what has already been settled," or equally superfluous actions.

182.

جا التخروف يعلم ابوه الرعي

The lamb came to teach its father how to feed.

183.

جاءوا لينعلوا خيل الباشا فمدّت الخنفسة رجلها

They came to shoe the horses of the Pâshâ ; the beetle then stretched out its leg (to be shod).

On ridiculous pretensions.

جمل موضع جمل يترك

The camel crouches down on the place of another camel.

This is said when one great dignitary dies and another immediately takes his place. In travelling, the places where the camels repose on the evening station are distinguished from the surrounding country, and caravans usually halt at the same spots.

جَبَّ مَا يَمْتَلِي مِنَ النِّدَا

A well is not to be filled with dew.

This is said when trifling presents are offered to a powerful person who is known to be greedy.

186.

جِيتَ الْاَقْرَعُ يُونْسَنِي كَشَفَ رَاسَهُ وَخَوَّفَنِي

I came to the scabby-headed (person) to be amused in his company; he uncovered his head and frightened me.

Friendship ceases when a person's real character is known.

187.

جَا وَاحِدٌ يَعِدُّ امْوَاجَ الْبَحْرِ غَلَطَ قَالَ التَّجِيَّاتُ اَكْثَرُ مِنَ الرَّاجِحَاتِ

One came to count the waves of the sea; he erred (in the reckoning). "There are (at all events) more coming than going," he said.

On paltry expedients to conceal ignorance or negligence. The expression الحيات أكثر من الراجحات is likewise often used to console a person for some disappointment, and then it means "one opportunity is lost, but another will present itself." جيات in the Egyptian dialect for جايات

جوا يحلبوا التيس ضرب

They came to milk the goat; he br—ke w—nd.

The stupid clown disappoints those who require his services. جاءوا used in Egypt for جاءوا

189.

جهد المقلّ دموعه

The efforts of the poor are his tears.

The poor can only weep for the misfortunes of others, but are not able to alleviate them; this is a frequent apology for withholding assistance.

190.

Thy neighbour is thy teacher.

We learn from our companions.

191.

جوع القملة في رأس الاقرع

(Like) the hunger of the louse upon the head of the scabby.

Is said when a person in affluence pleads poverty.

جا الهم عند الهم يحدث

Grief came to converse with grief.

The afflicted cannot console the afflicted.

جنازة غريب لا وراه و لا قدامه

(Like) the burial of a stranger, no one goes before and no one behind him.

This is said of a person who retires from office without the regret of any one. لا وراه is to be understood as لا وراه احد

جندي ما قبل شيع طرطوره

The (intercession of the) soldier was not accepted, he (then) sent the soldier's cap (to intercede for him).

If the patronage of the master cannot serve, that of the servant can be of little avail. In Egypt جندي implies a horse soldier, in opposition to a foot soldier or عسكري—The Egyptians use شيع as the common term for “to send.” طرطور is the high woollen or fur cap worn by the horsemen, called dely or delaty.

جنة ترعاها الخنازير

A paradise in which hogs feed.

Said of a beautiful woman whose husband is ugly.

196.

جهلٌ يعولني خيرٌ من عقلٍ اعولهُ

Ignorance that supports me is better than wisdom which I must support.

Rather take from the fool, than give to the wise.

197.

جهلك اشد من كفرك

Thou art more ignorant even than thou art impious.

Verbatim : "thy ignorance is stronger than thy impiety." The word كافر is a very common term of insult among the Moslim Egyptians themselves, and means, when applied by one of them to another, "impious."

الجمال في شي والجمال في شي

The camel has his projects, and the camel driver has his projects.

The interests of the governor and the governed are never alike. في شي is here to be understood as نيتة في شي.

199.*

اجلس حيث يبوخذ بيدك و تمذل لا حيث يبوخذ
برجلك و تجر

Sit down when thou art taken by the hand and when thou receivest presents; and not when they lay hold of thy leg and drag thee (away).

Visit only where thou art welcome. With respect to the expression يُؤْخَذُ بِيَدِكَ some remarks shall be offered hereafter.

حرف الحاء

200.

جَانِكِ مَنَاقِرَةٌ طَلَّقَ بَنَتَهَا

Is thy mother-in-law quarrelsome? Divorce her daughter.

Cut up the evil by the root. The mother and daughter will leave thy house together.

حَبِيبِي مَلِيحٌ وَ يَتَعَمُّ بَنْجٌ

(In truth) my lover is a fine fellow, and he wears a straw turban.

Said in derision of a ridiculous spark. يَتَعَمُّ “to tie,” and “to wear a turban.” بَنْجٌ are the mats made of dry reeds in which is packed the charcoal sent to Cairo from the country about Thebes.

حزينة ما لها بقر فتلت شعرتها فرقة

Afflicted, because she has no cows; she twisted her hair into a whip.

Said of one who consoles himself for the want of enjoyments by mere phantasms. فرقة is a whip made of date-leaves, with which the peasants drive their oxen in ploughing or drawing at the water-mills; it is likewise called رخو—The word شعرة must not be confounded with شعر or “hair,” although I have so translated it; this latter means the “hair of the head;” but شعرة those hairs which in the East it is usual to shave off or remove by a depilatory, although the slovenly peasant-women often allow them to grow for months.

حزينة ما لها بيت اشترت مكنسة و زيت

Afflicted at having no house, she bought a broomstick and some oil.

Of the same signification as the proverb immediately preceding.

حزينة ما لها عينين اشترت مراية بدرهمين

Aggrieved because she had no eyes, she purchased a looking-glass for two derhems.

Of the same import. مراة for مراية

حسبنا حساب الحية و العقرب و ام اربعة و اربعين ما
كانت لنا في حساب

In our account we reckoned the serpent and the scorpion; but the "erba wa erbayn" was not in our reckoning.

We have not taken proper precautions against the most dangerous enemy. The "erba wa erbayn" is a small spider-like insect, which is said to have forty-four feet, whence it derives its name. It is reputed extremely venomous. I never happened to see one.

حلبوا قردة كشت قالوا اللبن اللي يجي من دي
الوجه حرام

They milked a monkey; she drew back in a surly manner. "The milk," said they, "which comes from (one. with) that face is (surely) bad stuff."

The wretch who with affectation and grimace refuses to assist others by a service that would reflect honour on himself, will never do any good. يكش in the Egyptian dialect means "to draw back sulkily," or like a prude or coquette, if any one approach too near. حرام not only signifies "unlawful" or "forbidden," but in common speech, "worthless."

حَاقَّةٌ بَلَا جَاءَ صَفْعٌ حَاضِرٌ

Anger without power (is) a blow ready.

If a person become angry with another to whom he is inferior in strength, he may expect to receive a blow. حَاقَّة in the Egyptian dialect signifies "anger," as well as "stupidity." It is said, تَحَمَّيْتُ مِنْهُ "I became angry with him." جَاءَ is "official power, influence, importance, patronage derived from rank or wealth." صَفْعٌ equivalent to تَفَا "a blow on the neck."

208.

حَلِّتَنِي مِنْ عَامُودٍ لِعَامُودٍ لَعَلَّ يَأْتِي فَرَجٌ

Loose me from pillar to pillar; perchance it may cause liberation.

Loose my chains from one pillar, and fasten them to another, said a prisoner, perhaps in so doing I may effect my release. This signifies, that the unfortunate grasp at the most trifling circumstance in hopes of relief. Among other meanings فَرَجٌ implies deliverance, relief, return of good luck, an opening to happier circumstances. In this sense God is styled فَارِجٌ—and when Arabs pray for deliverance from misfortunes they always address him by this name, and say يَا فَارِجُ—The expression فِيهِ فَرَجٌ is often used in like manner to console a person, and then means "hope the best!"

جَرَّ فِي دُكَّانِ زَجَاجٍ

A storm in the shop of a glass-dealer.

Signifying that a thing is quite out of place.

حَطَّهْ فِي قَفَّةِ الْمَلُوكِيَّةِ طَلَعَ فِي قَفَّةِ الْبَادَنْجَانِ

He put him into the basket of Meloukhye; he came out of the basket of Bádenján.

Said of one who is continually running about and seen almost at the same time in different parts of the town, always in great haste. The Meloukhye is corchorus olitorius, a favourite vegetable among the Egyptians. Bádenján, the egg-plant, is likewise much esteemed by them.

211.

حَزِينَةٌ مَا لَهَا دَارٌ عَمِلَتْ تَقْبَتَهَا زُرْبِيَّةً

Afflicted because she had no house, she made a livery stable of the hole (in which she lived).

On the ridiculous attempts of poor people to imitate the great, or to appear rich. تَقْبَةٌ for تَقْبَةٌ means a "hole," more particularly foramen ani. In derision this term is applied to a small dirty place where poor persons live. زُرْبِيَّةٌ a public stable wherein cows are kept in the town at that season when the open country is inundated. Similar stables are found in every quarter of the town, and the cows kept therein furnish Cairo with milk during the inundation.

212.

حَكَّ رَغِيفٌ بِرَغِيفٍ لَا بَدَّ مِنْ لَبَابِهِ

Rub a loaf against a loaf, no doubt of its crumbs (coming forth).

Set two men of equal powers against each other,
their true character will appear from that experiment.

213.

حَوَّلَ بَابَ اسْطَبْلِكَ

Remove the gate of thy stable to another side.

This is generally said on averting the danger of the evil eye. If a house is reputed of evil omen (شَوْءٌ), the owner usually walls up the gate, and opens one at another side, by which he hopes to avert the baneful consequences of the evil eye of his enemies. اسْطَبْلٌ (or اسْطَبِل) is the origin of "stabulum," a stable.

A virtuous woman had patience (with her husband), her house flourished (or continued well peopled).

حرّة البيت means here "to be peopled," or to continue inhabited by all its inmates; in opposition to بيتها خربت words which would have been used if her husband had divorced her and she had left the house: here is to be understood حرّة ان صبرت

218.

حديثكم طيب و بيتنا بعيد

Your talking is fine, but our house is far distant.

In spite of all your fine reasoning I am far from complying with your desire. حديث is often used in Egypt synonymously with كلام as the verb يتحدث is used instead of يتكلم

حدبا عرجا و يدها اليمين فلجا

Crook-backed, limping, her right hand trembling.

Denoting a woman afflicted with every kind of misery. فالج in the Egyptian dialect, means one who labours under a tremor produced by extreme debility. Instead of يَمِين it ought to be يَمَنَة—because يد is feminine; but the Egyptians very often confound the genders. It may, however, be possibly understood here as يَدِهَا مِنْ جَانِبِ الْيَمِينِ

220.

حَبَّكَ الْحَبَّ وَبَغْضَكَ الرَّبَّ

May the ulcer (of the Franks) love thee, and the Lord hate thee.

234.

خذ العلم و الخير من خراطيم البقر

Acquire learning and information (even if they come) from the mouths of cows.

Never object to any source from which you may derive useful knowledge. خرطوم is the snout of a hog, and generally applied to any ugly mouth.

خذ من الغريم و لو حجر

Take from the (bad) debtor were it but a stone.

Do not refuse from a bad debtor whatsoever he may pay on account. In receiving a small part of a considerable debt, it is often said,

شعرة من الخنزير أحسن من ذقنه

A single bristle of the hog is better than all his (the bad debtor's) beard.

236.

خنفسة علي مكنسة داخلة المستراح قال انظر الحامل المحمول و دار الوكالة

*A beetle upon a broomstick was entering the privy ;
"look," said one, "at the carrier, the carried,

On ingratitude,

242

خَلَّوْا الْغَزْلَ الْمَخْبِلَ لَدَى الْقَلْبِ الْمَدْبِلِ

Leave the entangled yarn to be untwisted by the effeminate or pusillanimous.

الْمَخْبِلُ interwoven, intricate, disordered ; this sense is likewise expressed by مَلَخَبَطٌ The word الْمَدْبِلُ in the Egyptian dialect for ذابل signifies "effeminate," "weak-hearted," "unable to make exertion." لَهْذِي for لدي This saying means that the business must be suited to the capacity or character of a man, and the puny or weak-hearted must be employed in women's work.

خاوي البطن و يعض لَبَان

Of empty stomach, yet he chews incense.

A hungry beggar, yet affecting the manners of great people. It is a common practice in Egypt among the higher classes to chew incense in order to sweeten the breath; or, as it is said, to facilitate digestion.

خذ من عقله و حطّه في المرجونة

Take his understanding and put it into the basket (at thy back).

Said in derision of a person's understanding. مرجونة is a small basket which the poor Nubians, who come to try their fortunes at Cairo, sling upon their back, and carry in it their food and miserable luggage.

خير المال ما وجهته وجهه

Those are the best riches which are spent in their proper place.

Literally, "which are directed towards the proper side."

246.

خير الناس من فرح للناس بالخير

He is the chosen of the people who rejoices in the welfare of others.

247.

الخرق يالرفق يلحم

With gentleness the fracture is repaired.

With politeness and softness a reconciliation can be effected in quarrels. This refers to the common saying, خرق خرق في الصكبة, "a hole has been bored in the friendship," or "friends have been disunited."

الخضوع عند الحاجات رجولية

To be humble when we want (the help of others) is manliness.

This maxim is deeply impressed on the minds of people in the East. الحاجات "affairs," "business," "wants," "demands from others," &c.

اخرج الطمع من قلبك يحل القيد من رجلك

Expel avidity from thy heart; the fetters will be loosened from thy foot.

Be contented, and thou wilt be free.

خلّوه بهمه اخذ واحدة قدر أمه

Leave him alone with his grief—he has taken one as old as his mother.

Of one who deserves his misfortunes. The man had married an old woman, and might therefore have expected from the first not to be very happy with her. اخذ is often used for زوج “he married.” قدر “similar to anything in quantity or quality;” often employed in the same sense as مثل

خذها من سكران ولا تاخذها من صاحي

Take (the wine) from the drunkard and do not take it from the sober.

The sober will more probably betray thee in this instance than the drunkard. The خذها of خذها refers to خمر or “wine.” صاحي “one who is awake,” “in possession of his senses,” “sober.”

252.

خذ الكتاب من عنوانه

Take the book by its title; or, take the letter by its address.

The first view teaches us to judge of a person's character, and whether he be a fit object for a nearer acquaintance. Such is generally thought in the East, where a Lavaterian system of physiognomy prevails. Every governor of a province is a physiognomist, and fancies that he can ascertain in the looks or mien of those brought before him which is the guilty party. A prepossessing face has more influence in the East than in Europe; but the rules of physiognomy are never strictly analysed, and it is chiefly from the expression of the eyes and the state of the eyebrows and nose that an opinion is formed.

خبزه مأكبوز و ماءه في الكوز

His bread is kneaded and his water is in the jug.

كوز is a small earthen or tin jug, by which water is taken out of the large jars that stand in the vestibule of each house in Egypt.

254.

خذ بلاش قال ما يسع التليس

Take it for nothing. ("No,") he said, "my sack is not large enough (to contain it)."

On the great luck of some to whom more is offered than they can accept. تليس is a sack of black or white and black striped goat hair, in which the peasants carry their corn to market. بلاشي for بلاشي is the common expression in Egypt for "gratis."

255.

خذ طينة و اضربها في الحيط ان ما لثقت اثرت

Take a piece of mud, strike it against the wall, if it do not stick it will leave a mark.

On the effects of slander.

256.

خيال خرا و يرمح في النخل

A bad rider—yet he gallops about among the date-trees.

This is said of the ignorant who affect to display learning. خرا “dirt,” is often used to express a “thing as bad as dirt,” “useless,” “miserable.” يرمح “to set off the horse in full gallop,” “to ride at full speed.” To gallop among date-trees is of course difficult on account of the numerous turnings.

خَذِ اللِّصَّ قَبْلَ أَنْ يَأْخُذَكَ

Take the thief before he take thee.

258.

خَذِ بِيَدِي الْيَوْمَ أَخَذْ بِرِجْلِكَ غَدًا

Take me by the hand to-day, I will take thee by the foot to-morrow.

Be kind to me now; I will hereafter return the favour two-fold. خَذِ بِيَدِي is equivalent to خَذِ بِيَدِي “take my hand,” or “assist me.” The beggars at Cairo constantly say الله ياخذ بيد الكريم “God assists the charitable and generous.” الله ياخذ بيدك “May God assist thee.” The expression “I will take thee by the foot,” means that on a future occasion I will assist thee more powerfully than thou assistest me at present.

خاطر من استغني براه

He exposes himself (to danger) who regards his own counsel or opinion as sufficient.

استغني is here in the same sense as اكتفي But this is not the usual signification of the word in Egypt, where it commonly means "not to be in want of." Thus a very frequent expression is استغنيت عنه "I do not want it," "I can dispense with it."

260.

خذ الغليل من الليم و ذمه

Take the merest trifle from the vile and abuse him (at the same time).

The miser deserves no better treatment. الليم is here put for البخيل "the miser." الذم properly signifies "to reproach a person with his bad qualities," ذكر المعاييب

حرف الدال

261.

دار الظالم خراب و لو بعد حين

The house of the unjust oppressor is (or must be) destroyed, though it should happen in distant times.

262.

ديار مصر خيرها لغيرها

The riches of Egypt are for the foreigners therein.

Since the time of the Pharaohs Egypt has never been governed by national rulers, but constantly by foreigners. ديار مصر is said in the same sense as دار النوبة or دار فور 263.

دخل شي في اضراسه ما بقي يخرج

Something has entered into his back teeth that will never come out again.

This is applied to a person who cannot rid himself of a disagreeable companion or confidant. The word بَقِيَ pronounced “baka,” is constantly employed as an adverb, sometimes quite superfluously and without any meaning; at other times it signifies “now,” “again,” “then,” “never.”

264.

دموع الفواجر حواضر

The tears of the adultress are ever ready.

265.

دار و بوابه ما يعثر الفار فيها بلبابه

A house with its gate—and the monk cannot find a crumb of bread in it.

On the stinginess of a person in easy circumstances. "A house with its gate," implies that it is a well-conditioned dwelling. يعثر for يعثر "to stumble," "to make a false step," and therefore "to sin;" likewise "to find," or "light upon." بوابة is often used synonymously with باب—at other times it means a "by-gate." The gates which inclose the interior quarters of the town are called بوابة

266.

دَبَّ لَا يَحْلَبُ وَلَا يَجْنُبُ وَلَا يَرْكَبُ

(Like) a bear that is neither to be milked, nor to be led in parade, nor to be ridden.

Said of a useless clown. دَبَّ often pronounced دَبَّ is a "bear." Turks from Anadolia sometimes exhibit bears in shows at Cairo. A large party of those Turks came in 1814 from Romelia to Cairo with half-a-dozen bears. The people then said, that in Mohammed Aly's country (he is a native of the sea coast of Romelia,) every man was a dancing master to a bear, and that the pasha had sent for them to remind him of his youthful pursuits. On the spreading of this report the bears and their masters were immediately banished from the country. يَجْنُبُ comes from جَنِيبُ a horse led in parade before a great man in public processions.

دُسُوتُهُمْ عَالِيَةٌ وَبُطُونُهُمْ خَالِيَةٌ

Their boilers are high; their stomachs are empty.

Costly furniture in a house, but no provisions nor money. دسوت is the plural of دست “a boiler,” or “large pan.”

268.

دَقَّ عَلِي الْبَابَ قَالَ مَنْ دَا قَالَ كَسْ بَلَّاشَ قَالَ ادْخُلْ وَلَوْ أَنَّكَ سَمَّ الْمَوْتَ

*There was a knock at the door. “Who is there?”
“A wench for nothing.” “Enter,” he said, “even if thou wert the poison of death.”*

What is given gratis is always acceptable; and according to that rule no one in the East, from the lowest to the highest, refuses a present. On this subject the following proverb also is cited:

اللي بَلَّاشَ كَتَرَّ مِنْهُ الِلي بَغْلُوسَ حَوْدَ عَنْهُ

What is for nothing, get still more of it; what is for money, avoid it.

حَوْدَ عَنْهُ “take another road that you may not meet it.” مَنْ هَذَا for مَنْ هَذَا is the common interrogation at Cairo for “who is there?” In Syria they say مَنْ هُوَ هَذَا and likewise مَنْ هَذَا instead of مَنْ هُوَ هَذَا

كَسْ is not properly “a wench;” its true meaning may be found in the dictionaries. It is a term heard much more frequently in public than Europeans would suppose, who generally entertain very false notions concerning the modesty and decency of the Easterns, with respect at least to language.

دود الخلّ منه

The worms of the vinegar are of the vinegar itself.

This is said when something disagreeable happens in a family caused by one of its ill-natured members.

دع ما راب و كل ما طاب

Leave (or do not think on) what is spoiled, but eat the good things (that are before thee).

تلف in the Egyptian dialect is the same as راب “to be spoiled,” and is principally said of food. “what fell to thy lot of good things.” The sense of this proverb is expressed in the following ancient verses :

خُذْ مِنْ زَمَانِكَ مَا صَفَا وَدَعِ الَّذِي فِيهِ الْكَدْرُ
فَالْعَمْرُ اقْصُرْ مِنْ مَعَانِبَةِ الزَّمَانِ عَلَيَّ الْغَيْرِ 271.

دار الحَقّ علي غطاءه لما لتقاه

The box went in search of its lid until it met with it.

On a person's eagerly watching an opportunity and at last finding it. الحَقّ is a small box made of ivory or bone wherein perfumes, balm, civet, musk, &c., are sold. لما in the Egyptian dialect often implies, as here, the same as حتي and then means “until.”

272.

الدراهم مراهم

Money is sweet balm.

It heals all wounds. Such is the general opinion in the East.

273.

الذابة تساوي مقرعة

The animal is worth (no more than) a whip.

As much as to say "it is worth nothing." مقرعة is a scourge or whip made of date-branches cut into thin slips, still holding together like a harlequin's wand: children play with it. تساوي "it is equal," "it is like," and more usually "it is worth." In Egypt it is pronounced as if written يسوا—thus they say, ايش يسوا "what is it worth?" "what is the price of it?"

274.

دوا الدهر الصبر عليه

The remedy against (bad) times is to have patience with them.

In their nervous language the ancient Arabs said,

واكلت دهرک اربعين و اربعاً فاصبر لاکلتہ و عضة نابه

Thou hast eaten (or enjoyed) thy age for forty-four years; wait then when it preys upon thee with its back teeth.

الدهر is sometimes limited to the space of forty-four years, or the computed age of man.

275.

دنياك ما انت فيه

(That is) thy world wherein thou findest thyself.

Enjoy the present moment. ما انت فيه stands for الشي ما انت فيه or الحال ما انت فيه The cannot relate to دنيا which is of the feminine gender.

حرف الذال

276.*

ذكروا مصر للقاهرة قامت باب اللوق بحشاشتها

They mentioned Misr to Kahera; on which Báb el Look rose with its weeds.

In ridicule of those who push themselves forwards to attract notice while nobody pays them attention. They mentioned Misr (or Fostát, the first-built Moslim city, southward of the present Cairo,) to Kahera, the town erected by the Fatemites, on the north of Fostát. Báb el Look is a small and at present half-ruined quarter formerly belonging to to Fostát, but now included within the environs of Southern Cairo ; it is in many places quite deserted and abounds with grass and weeds ; it had, therefore, but slight pretensions for standing up when Misr (or Fostát) was mentioned, of which it formed one of the worst quarters or rather suburbs.

ذكروا النبي بكوا قال اسمعوا ايش قال

They mentioned the Prophet ; the people wept.
"Hear," cried one, "what he said" (rather than weep).

ذا سنبرسك ما احناش حشوة

That is a patty, (they said,) but we are not (fit to be) its stuffing.

A fine affair ; but not one in which we can participate. سنبرسك is a flat meat patty sold in the bázár. احنا according to the Egyptian pronunciation for حشو. نحن "the hashed meat and spices with which patties and other dishes are stuffed." The ش of احناش is the common appendage to nouns and verbs in the Egyptian dialect.

279.

ذاك اللون اقلعه من اسنانك

Pull this dish out of thy teeth.

This is not made for you. لون in the Egyptian dialect "a dish of cooked victuals."

280.

ذَا زَرَّبَ مَا يَسُدُّ رِيحَ

That is a lattice-work that does not keep off wind.

On half-measures. زَرَّب is a lattice-work used as sheds in gardens, or upon balconies, which are usually covered with vines or creeping plants. It is made of the بوص or dry canes of the durra. ذَا for هذا. يَسُدُّ "to keep off, to stop or hinder."

281.

ذَا شَغَلَ الْمَعْلَمَ لَابْنَهُ

That is (like) the master's work for his son.

In praise of nice and well-executed work.

282.

ذِي لُفَّةٍ بِيْطَارِيَّةٍ

That is a plaster like (the plaster) of a horse doctor.

Said of a coarse remedy applied to some evil. بِيْطَار "the horse-smith," who, at Cairo, is likewise veterinary surgeon.

283.

ذِي شَيْءٍ ارْخَصَ مِنْ الصَّكِّ

That is a thing cheaper than a blow.

It is of a very low price. صَكِّ or سَكِّ "a blow on the neck."

284.

ذَا جَوْعَ يَفْتَتِ الزَّرْدُ

That is a hunger that breaks a cuirass.

Said of boundless avidity or greediness. يَفْتَتِ in the Egyptian dialect is often used for يَكْسِرُ "to break." زرد "a coat of mail," "a cuirass."

285.*

ذَنْبُ الْكَلْبِ عَمْرَهٗ مَا يَسْتَقِيمُ

A dog's tail never stands straight.

Said of incorrigible habits. عَمْرَهٗ "during his whole life," is often used for اَبَد "never," without any reference to life-time.

ذَبَابَةٌ مَا هِيَ شَيْءٌ وَتَغْلَتُ الرُّوحَ

A fly is nothing ; yet it creates loathsomeness.

The most insignificant person may prove disagreeable. تَغْلَتُ in the Egyptian dialect "to excite disgust," "to become loathsome." تَغْلَتُ مِنْهُ "he has disgusted me." Of the same sense is the term تَقْرَفُ 287.

ذَلَّ الْعَزْلُ يَضْحَكُ مِنْ تَيْهِ الْوَلَايَةِ

The removal from office which is despised, laughs at the pride of government.

When we have departed from our station we begin to see what was ridiculous in it. ذَلّ the “disdained, despised, mean, miserable.” This is here personified together with العزل which is the removal from office, rank, or power. تيه “puffed up pride.”

288.

ذر مشكل القول و أن كان حقا

Leave off ambiguous talking, should it even be true.

289.*

ذل من لا سفيه له

Debased is he who has no impudent defender.

سفيه “insolent, impudent.” So are called in Egypt those persons whom their masters, patrons, or friends employ in fighting their quarrels or in disputing for them with their insolent behaviour and impudent language: people of this kind are easily found at Cairo. The following verse expresses the same sense :

و من يحكم و ليس له سفيه يلاقي المضلات من الرجال

290.

ذكرني فبك سمار اهلي

Thy mouth put me in mind of the jackass at home (or of my family).

On a person appearing well at first, but proving a worthless object on nearer view. A young man followed a woman in the street thinking her pretty ;

when she led him to a remote corner and lifted up her veil, he discovered her ugliness, and exclaimed in those words.

291.

ذهبت الناس و بقي النسناس

The people went away; the baboons remained.

نسناس is a species of the monkey tribe, I believe a baboon. بقي in the Egyptian dialect is seldom conjugated; it ought here to be بقيت

حرف الرآ

292.

راحت السكره و جات الفكرت

Drunkenness departed and reflection came.

293.

رزق الكلاب علي المجانين

Dogs are left to be provided for by fools.

The extravagant fool throws away his money upon those who little deserve it. رزق here means "the lot," or "whatever is assigned by destiny." In this sense it is often employed, and we find it so in the Korán. To this sentence we might here suppose prefixed جَعَلَ الله. In Syria the term رزق is often used to express “merchandise,” which in Egypt is called بضاعة.

294.

رزقت الغردة وردة

A rose fell to the lot of a monkey.

Said of persons little deserving their good luck.

295.

رأيتك حاج و الناس راجعين

I saw thee go on the pilgrimage at the same time that the people returned from it.

On tardiness.

296.

راح يتوضي غرق

He went to make his ablutions in a pond and was drowned.

He expected some advantage, but instead of it met with total ruin.

297.

رحم الله امه كانت اقود من ابوه

God bless his mother ; she was more profligate than his father.

Reviling language. اقود from قواد (see Dictionary). The meaning of الله رحم is literally “God have mercy;" but in vulgar use the phrase corresponds rather with the English "God bless him!"

رزق غدا لغدا

The provision for to-morrow belongs to the morrow.

Do not trouble thyself about futurity.

299.

ردوا لنا مقطفنا ما نريد عنب

Give us back our basket, we do not wish for any grapes (therein).

Pay what thou owest us only, we want no profit from it. مقطف a basket made of date-leaves, in which the servants bring fruits and vegetables from the market.

رمية من غير رامي

A throw without a thrower.

This is said in excuse of a loose word inadvertently dropped and giving offence to another person:

301.

راح مني بشحم كلاه

He went away from me together with the fat of the kidneys.

Used to express that the person left me and took away even the smallest trifle of what was due to him; so that he has no further demands on me. When a sheep is killed by a private person some of the bystanders often take away the kidneys, or at least the fat that incloses them, as due to the public from him who slaughters the sheep. كِلَاد is the Egyptian plural of كَلِيَة "kidney."

روح احمض ما عندك اطبخه

Go, (and) the most sour thou hast, cook it.

An answer to one who excuses himself on pretence of the bad state of his larder for not being able to entertain a guest. In the vulgar Egyptian dialect روح is the imperative instead of رَح 303.

رحم الله من زار و خفف

God bless him who pays visits, and short visits.

The visits in the East, and chiefly those paid by women to each other, sometimes last a whole day; and even the visits of men are usually prolonged to a most unreasonable length. خَفَّف "to lighten," "cause to be less heavy," and here "to shorten."

سموك راجح قال ان شا الله نجى الحق

They have called thee Rádjeh. "If God please," they said, "(now) we shall come to the just (measure)."

Thy reputation and outward appearance promise much. Rádjeh is frequently used as a man's name; it also in the Egyptian dialect signifies "to increase the weight of the lighter scale until it equal the other." الحق is not only "truth," but also "just," and "one's own due."

327.

ساعة لقلبك و ساعة لربك

One hour for thy heart, and one hour for thy Lord.

Divide thy time between heavenly and worldly concerns.

ستي و لاش و جاها النفاس

A lean little thing of a lady; and (moreover) in childbed.

She was miserable enough, and still became more miserable (by the labours of childbed). ستي used in the Egyptian dialect for ست — و لاش is said instead of لاشي فيه and a common expression to denote a person or thing of utter insignificance, poor, thin, miserable. النفاس is the state of a woman for forty days after the birth of her child, during which time the Moslim law regards her as impure.

سوسوا السفل بالمخالفة

Govern the rabble by opposing them.

يسوس — ساسا is the imperative of the verb سوسوا
The substantive is سياسة which means the government or administration of the executive power, in opposition to that of the judicial body or حكم الشرع. In the Egyptian dialect سياسة has also another sense, and means "to talk gently to a person," "to coax or wheedle him." سياسته means then, "I have talked gently with him, enticed him by soft words." The grooms in Egypt are called ساييس (singular سايس) because they treat (or ought to treat) the horse gently. The proverb means, that low people can only be governed by acting in direct opposition to their inclinations.

سمع الغنا برسام حاد

The hearing of music is a poignant pain.

This is said in ridicule of misers, who are reproached for their contempt of music and songs; in proof of which the following saying is attributed to them :

الانسان يسمع فيطرب

فيبتفق فيفتكر فيغتم فيهوت

The person listens (to music), he rejoices in it, spends money (on the songstress); then comes reflection, he grieves and dies.

برسام a Persian word, meaning the pain of any disease; it is naturalized in Egypt among the physicians, and signifies a violent pain, or distemper in the brain.

336.

سارت به الركبان

The riders have carried it with them (on their journey).

Said of a piece of news so publicly known, that even the Bedouin travellers heard it, and reported it in every place on their way. ركب is a party of Bedouins mounted on horses or camels.

337.

الاستقصا فرقة

Inquiries become (or lead to) separation.

Too much inquisitiveness or curiosity about the affairs of another may cause a disagreement and separation.

338.*

السلطان يعلم ولا يعلم

The sultán teaches, and is not to be taught.

339.*

اسجد لقرن السوء في زمانه

Prostrate thyself before the wicked monkey in his time (of power).

340.

السنور الصياح لا يصطاد شي

The cat that is (always) crying catches nothing.

To be successful in taking game one must proceed with secrecy and caution.

 حرف الشين

341.

شي ما طبخنا جانا دي الجمر من اين

We have nothing cooked; whence came this fiery coal?

On unforeseen and undeserved mishaps. جمر is the usual term for lighted coal. بصة is employed also in the same sense.

342.

شي ما اكلنا نشرب علي ايش

We have eaten nothing; why should we drink?

We have not done anything to render necessary the action in question. It is usual among people in the East to drink only after eating, so that being thirsty they may the more enjoy the draught. علي ايش is put here for لايش or لايشي as the prepositions علي and الي are in general used indiscrimi-nately. Thus, تصرنني علي اي “why, or for what dost thou beat me?”

343.

شددوني حزموني ما لي علي الحرب طاقة

They prepared me ; they girded me ; but I have not strength for war.

Notwithstanding every assistance the person is unfit for his business. شددوني from يشدّ “to make ready,” “to pack up and prepare for travelling.”

344.

شبيهه الشي منجذب اليه

It resembles the thing that is attracted towards it.

This saying, which sounds better in Arabic than in my translation, is frequently quoted, to say that a person frequents those people only whose characters agree with his own. The construction is الشي الذي منجذب اليه شبيهه

345.

شكروا القط خري في بيت الدقيق

They praised the cat ; she (then went and) dirted in the meal-box.

Said of those who become insolent and overbearing in consequence of praise.

346.

شالوه من الدقن خطوه في الشارب

They took it off from the beard and put it into the moustaches.

The change did not better the condition.

347.

شرا العبد و لا تربيته

The buying of a slave ; but not the training of him.

The Eastern people know well how difficult a task it is to educate a slave and break his stubborn temper.

348.

شابت لحيته طابت عشرته

His beard became grey ; his society (then) became agreeable.

349.

شهر ما هو لك لا تعد ايامه

Of a month that does not belong to thee, do not count the days.

Do not score up the profits of others which can never become thine own. By شهر or "month," is here understood the monthly pay or gain.

350.

شحات من شحات امتلات ماخلاته

A beggar filled his sack from another beggar.

شحات a corruption of شحاز commonly used in Egypt for "a beggar." مخللة is the bag out of which horses and asses get their evening allowance of barley or beans. It is loosely tied to the mouth over the head, like a muzzle, and the mouth and half of the head are in the bag during the time of feeding.

351.

شرط المرافقة الموافقة

The (first) condition of friendship is to agree with each other.

352.

شيب و عيب

Greyheaded and vicious.

353.*

شما ته الحساد تغفت الفواد

The rejoicing of the envious rends the heart.

354.

شرارة تحرق الحارة

A single spark can burn the whole quarter.

Trifles may cause universal disaster.

شي لا يشبع يجوع

A thing that does not satiate, creates hunger.

356.*

شيل بتاعك حتي احط بتاعي لا حين انا مستعاجل

Take away thine, that I may put down mine, for I am in haste.

On an angry person in haste, who thinks that every one must make room for him and give way to his desires or caprices. بتاعي and بتاعك are expressions commonly used in Egypt for "thine" and "mine." In the same manner متاعي and متاعك are used by the Moggrebíns; and the Arabians say حقي and حقك From the singular بتاع a plural is thus formed in the vulgar dialect, بتوع—and we hear اللخيل بطوعي "my horses," الكتب بطوعه "his books," الاولاد بطوعك "thy children."

357.

شبعت اكلاب تهادوا

The dogs became satiated, and then made presents to each other (of the remaining meat).

This is applied to the generosity evinced by páshás and other great men towards each other.

شي شاط و شي باط و شي اكلته القطاط

Part (of it) was burnt, part of it spoiled, and part eaten by the cats.

For money frivolously spent, such is the account given to him who had possessed it. قطاط a vulgar plural of قَط The term با is used by the gardeners ; who, about Cairo, are accustomed to prick the figs of the sycamore, while yet on the tree and before they are ripe, with a pointed iron, so as to tear out of them a piece, not larger than a pea ; this is done to render the fruit more sweet, for experience has shown that an increase of sweetness is the consequence of allowing the air to enter by that operation into the heart of the fruit. Figs that have not been pricked never acquire a good flavour and are called با or spoiled. The operation itself is styled “the circumcision of sycamore figs.” تَحْتِمِينَ الْجَمِيزِ

شيل يدك من المرق لا تحترق

Take off thy hand from the broth lest it should be burnt.

Said to expose an insidious adviser whose object was that he might have the broth for himself. لان لا تحترق in the Egyptian dialect for لا تحترق In similar cases the لان is often dropt in conversation.

شوبنخ و يتحالا

A little old man, yet he plays the part of a gay spark.

“to play the spark or gallant.” شوبنخ the diminutive of شينخ. يتحالا from حلو.

361.

شجرة تستظل بها لا تدعي بقطعها

A tree that affords thee shade, do not order it to be cut down.

362.

شيل ابوك عن اخوك

Take off thy father from thy brother.

This expression, which has no real sense in itself, has received, I know not how, a kind of meaning in the familiar language of conversation. It implies "after many difficulties," or "in short," or "to make few words," or "at last:" thus in talking of a journey they say, "we travelled, we became very tired on the road, thirst came upon us, and hunger, we had to fight—'take off thy father from thy brother'—until at last we arrived." كنا مسافرين فتعبنا في الطريق و عطشنا و جعنا و تقاتلنا شيل ابوك عن اخوك حتي وصلنا

363.

شخاخ انحدر علي خرا قال مرحبا قرداش

Urine alighted upon dirt. "Welcome, my friend," he said.

This is to ridicule the dirty rascally Turkish soldiers, who when they meet salute each other in the Turkish manner with the expression مرحبا قرداش "Welcome, brother, or friend!"

364.

الشرّ قديم

Evil is of old date.

365.

شغلني الشعير عن الشعر و البرّ عن البرّ

The barley engrossed my thoughts instead of the poetry, and the corn instead of liberality.

I had things quite different in my head. This saying, which is without wit, puns in the Arabic text. شغلني عنه "it engaged my leisure or attention and prevented me from adverting to the other." This is an expression much used.

 حرف الصاد

366.

صارت القوّة شاعرة

The owl has become a poetess.

Of those who undertake professions for which they are not qualified. القوّة more commonly called ام قويّة is that species of small owl which the Syrians denominate بومه

367.

صادفت الحمير التاليس

The asses have met with the sacks.

Misfortunes return. تاليس is the plural of تليس
(See No. 254.)

368.

صار نقاب الغراير واعظ

He who made a hole in the corn sacks has become a preacher.

A thief turned saint. نقاب one who bores a hole, more particularly with the intention of stealing. Thus نقاب الحيط signifies one who breaks through a wall that he may steal in the house, an operation practised with incredible dexterity by the thieves of Upper Egypt. غراير the plural of غرارة a corn bag carried by camels; it is shorter but wider than the تليس In the southern parts of Syria the غرارة is a corn measure.

صام سنة و فطر علي بصلة

He fasted for a whole year, and then broke his fast with an onion.

We sometimes find persons of good repute who forfeit their character upon some trifling occasion, or to obtain some small advantage. When the Ramadhán is over the Moslims break their fast on the morning of the great feast (يفطروا) with some dainty morsels from their kitchens. It is thought meritorious on that occasion to eat first a few dates, after the example of Mohammed, and it would be shameful to use so mean a thing as an onion. The term يفطر is applied to the legal breaking of the fast, as also to the illegal breaking of it during the course of the month of Ramadhán; and it is thus said of a person هو فاطر or "he is breakfasting," when he eats in secret, which thus becomes a very opprobrious expression.

صغار قوم كبار اخرين

The little among (certain) people are great among other people.

371.*

صَلَّحَتْ عَوِيشَةَ لَعَبْدِ الْكَرِيمِ

The little Ayshe well suited Abd el Kerym.

On the meeting of two persons who suit each other. يصلح لي in the Egyptian dialect means "it fits or suits me," "it is of use to me," or "proper for me." عوِيشَة is the diminutive of عَيْشَة 372.

صباح الغوّال و لا صباح العطار

The morning salutation to the bean-seller, and not to the druggist.

Rather be poor but healthy like a peasant, than rich but require the apothecary's medicines. The word صباح is here put for مصابحة "the first meeting or saluting on going out in the morning." According to popular belief in the East, the good or bad luck of the day is influenced by the object first seen on coming out of the door in the morning. Thus it is said if a lucky object present itself at early hours, صباحنا طيب "our morning salute is fortunate or good." الفول from فول is the man who early in the day sells coarse horse-beans (called when boiled مدمس) in the bázár; they form the principal breakfast of the lower classes; but it requires the stomach of a peasant to digest them—they are mixed with butter or lamp-oil. The druggists are at the same time the common physicians of the town.

اصاب التيس الماء و بل شواربه

The goat met the water and wetted his whiskers.

On a person immoderately enjoying the good luck that had happened to him.

374.

صاحب القليل اولي به

Who possesses little has the first right to it.

375.

صاهر كراشاتي جزار قال جا التخر لباب الدار

A seller of dogs-meat became the son-in-law of a butcher. "(There,)" they said, "the dirt has come to the gate of (its) house."

Said of a connection formed between two low fellows; it is usual to abridge this proverb and only quote the latter phrase, جا الخرا لباب الدار. The person is called كراشاتي who sells the كرشة or stomach of a sheep, together with tripes or entrails and all other kinds of dogs-meat; which, however, in the East, seldom falls to the lot of dogs, but is purchased by poor people.

صَقَلَ جَبَّتَهُ وَ نَفَشَ حِمِيَّتَهُ

He has smoothed his cloak and cleaned his beard.

He prepared himself for the business. صقل when used on the subject of cloth, means "to pass a hot iron over it to restore its lustre;" if spoken of paper, it means "to glaze it." جبة is the under vest of cloth as worn in the East. نفش in the Egyptian dialect "to cleanse the beard from dust;" the word نَسَحَ is used in the same sense.

377.

صَوْرَةُ الْمَوَدَّةِ الصَّدَقُ

The image of friendship is truth.

It is to be wished that the Egyptians would take this maxim as their guide. Truth in friendship does not occur in the East; I can at least conscientiously declare that neither in Syria nor in Egypt did any instance of its appearing under difficult circumstances ever come within my observation : but on the contrary, numerous cases where those who called themselves friends, betrayed each other on the slightest prospect of gain, or through fear, or some other base motive.

صاحب الحاجة اعمى

Who wants a thing is blind (to its faults).

In the Egyptian dialect صاحب الحاجة means "he who wants the thing," "who asks it," or also "he who possesses the thing." In the first sense الحاجة stands for الاحتياج—and صاحب الحاجة means then the same as طالب الحاجة (See No. 34.)

379.

اصاب اليهودي لحما رخيص فقال هذا منتن

A Jew found meat at a low price. "It stinks," he then said.

On the excuses offered by a miser.

صفعة بنقد خير من بدرة بنسيئة

A ready blow with cash is better than eighty thousand derhems of promised future payments.

بدره is equal to "eighty thousand derhems," a term not used at present in keeping accounts. نسيئة in the Egyptian dialect equivalent to اجل or وعد

 حرف الصان

381.

ضراط الابل و لا تسبيح اسمك

Rather (hear) the flatulencies of the camels, than the prayers of the fishes.

The most fatiguing journey by land is preferable to the pleasantest sea voyage. "Take thy passage by sea," said a person to his friend, "thou wilt see many fishes about the ship performing their devotions." "No," replied the friend, "I think it better to hear," &c. The Egyptians dislike sea voyages so much that most of them choose the tedious and fatiguing journey by land to Mekka, rather than the shorter passage by sea. تسبيح is the prayer سبحان الله and in general any homage paid to the divinity.

ضربتين في الرأس توجع

Two blows on the head cause pain.

Said of a person who has been twice cheated in the same manner.

383.

ضاحكوا علي السقا حسبوا من حقًا

They laughed with the water-carrier, he thought it to be true.

On the credulity with which inferiors listen to the joking promises of their superiors. ضاحكوا علي usually means "they laughed at him;" but sometimes, as here, "they laughed with him," or "joked with him." حسبوا the Egyptian pronunciation of حسبه having the last syllables very strongly accented, thus "hasabōoe."

384.

ضيّف الكرام يضيّف

The guest of the hospitable treats hospitably.

Or he learns hospitality from those who have evinced it towards him. This alludes to a custom general in the East; a man invited by any respectable person to an entertainment may bring with him several of his own friends without the desire or permission of the host; who, nevertheless, treats them with as much politeness as those whom he had himself particularly invited.

385.

سريبي و بكي و سبغني و شكّي

He beat me and cried out; he got the start of me and complained.

Said of those who complain in the midst of their successes.

386.

ضيف البدوي يسرق ثيابك

Entertain the Bedouin, he will steal thy clothes.

On ingratitude. The Bedouins of Egypt have the worst reputation amongst the townspeople; and many of them, reduced to a mongrel race between free Bedouins and peasants, have adopted all the vices of the latter. ضيف is the Egyptian imperative of يضيف "to treat as a guest," "to entertain."

387.

ضرب الحبيب مثل اكل زبيب

A blow from our lover is as (sweet as) the eating of raisins.

Here the wit lies merely in the Arabic rhyme of zebyb, raisin, with habyb, lover.

388.

ضاربني و لا تمسك خصاي

Fight with me, but do not lay hold of such a part as may be seriously injured.

Observe some decency and moderation in thy enmity. When the Egyptian peasants fight with each other it frequently happens that the weaker seizes his adversary in such a manner as to cause dangerous or fatal results.

389.

ضاع عقله في طوله

His understanding is lost in his length.

Said of a person as tall in stature as he is stupid in mind.

390.

ضحك اللوزة بين الحاكجرين

(Like) the laughter of the nut (when cracked) between two stones.

Said of smiles or laughter forced amidst poignant sufferings.

391.

ضع الأمور، واضعها تضعك موضعك

Put the things into their places, they will put thee into thy place.

Give to every one his due and right, and thou shalt have thy due. This saying also means, "make no innovations, and thou shalt not be disturbed."

392.

اضرب البري حتي يعترف المجتري

Strike the innocent, that the guilty may confess.

What a judicial maxim! It is related that in an intricate law suit, the kadhy caused a person avowedly innocent to be bastinadoed. When the poor man complained, the kadhy declared that he beat him merely with the hope that whoever was the real culprit might be induced to confess out of compassion.

393.

ضاحك الافاعي في جراب النورة
(Like) the laughter of serpents in the sack of burning chalk.

This in purport is similar to No. 390. To torment serpents the children put them into a sack of unslaked lime, and then pour water on it; the hisses of the serpents while they suffer the torture of burning, are called by the children "the laughing of the serpents." نورة is unextinguished lime; the same name is also given to a paste made of this lime and mercury, which is used in the bath as a depilatory to remove hairs from the body. جراب is a "leather bag."

394.

ضيق الحوصلة
(He is) of narrow throat.

This is said of a person who blabs every secret. حوصلة in Egypt signifies that part of a bird's throat wherein the food is deposited before digestion.

395.*

اضبط من الاعمي
(He) holds faster than the blind man.

Said of one who never relaxes his hold. Blind men grasp at the objects before them with peculiar force and eagerness.

396.

اضيق من سم الخياط

Narrower than the ear of a needle.

Applied to business of a difficult nature. سم الخياط is an expression meaning the "ear of a needle." We find in the Koran الخياط في سم الجمل حتي يلج حتي "until the camel shall enter into the needle's ear."

 حرف الطاء

397.

طار طيرك و اخذه غيرك

Thy bird flew away, and another took it.

Another has seized upon thy good luck, or of the opportunity that thou hast missed.

398.*

طرطوري يقع من لَاشة

(Like) a high cap, it falls off at a single blow.

This is said of an effeminate cowardly person طرطوري or طرطور (See No. 194.) In the Egyptian dialect لَاشة signifies a blow not very violent.

399.

طَبَّلْ طَبْلَكَ وَ زَمَّرْ زَمْرَكَ

Beat thy drum and blow thy pipe.

Thou hast obtained thy wishes, now rejoice, this is the time for mirth. The Egyptians frequently quote this saying. The drum and the pipe are instruments much used, especially among the peasants.

400.

طَيَّرَ طَيْرَهُ وَ رَاحَ يَجْرِي خَلْفَهُ

He caused his bird to fly away, and then went running after it.

On inconsistency of conduct.

401.

طَلَعَ نَقْبَهُ عَلَي شُونَةٍ

The hole (which he made) opened into a granary.

Said of the failure of a person's eager endeavours. A thief contrived to make a hole in a wall, expecting to find a room full of valuable goods on the other side ; but instead of it he found a magazine of straw or corn that was of little service to him. نَقْب is the hole made in the wall. شُونَةٌ is an open yard where the corn or straw belonging to government is kept. In every town of Egypt there is such a yard, where the corn is heaped up, but uncovered and exposed to rain ; which, however, only spoils the surface to the depth of six or eight inches. As far as I know, there exists at present in Egypt but one roofed magazine of corn : this was lately erected at Alexandria by Mohammed Aly Páshá.

طالب المال بلا مال كحامل الماء في الغربال

Who seeks for wealth without (previous) wealth is like him who carries water in a sieve.

403.*

طاعة اللسان ندامة

Obedience to the tongue (causes) repentance.

Who leaves his tongue uncontrolled, repents.

404.

طبيب يداوي الناس و هو عليل

(Like) a physician curing the people, while he himself is distempered.

(A verse.)

405.

طعمة الاسد تخمة الذيب

The food of the lion (causes) indigestion to the wolf.

تخمة surfeit, indigestion.

406.

الطمع الكاذب يدق الرقبة

False ambition severs the neck.

It leads to perdition. طمع means "avidity," whether for pecuniary gain, or for power, or fame, in which latter sense it means "ambition." يدق in the Egyptian dialect, "to strike," "to cut off," &c.

حرف الظاء

407.

ظلم البهايم حرام

The ill-treatment of brute creatures is unlawful.

408.

ظنان خوان بعيد الاحسان

Suspicious, treacherous, remote from good works.

Striking characteristics of a worthless person. ظنان is one who thinks ill of others, because it is understood الذي يظن بالسوء 409.

ظلوم غشوم كعب الشوم

Tyrannical, cheating, of bad omen.

كعب الشوم means that his heel (and therefore the whole person) is of bad omen: it stands for كعبه شوم The Egyptians say concerning a thing which is of bad omen to its possessor كعبه عليه "his heel is not good for it," or "his heel in passing over it will be unlucky.” (موش for ما هو شي) With respect to bad omens the Egyptians say “اعتاب و اكعاب و نواصي thresholds, heels, and the horses’ forelocks;” meaning that houses, men, and horses, are most exposed to the evil eye and bad omens. This is probably derived from the saying of Mohammed, ان يكون الشوم فغي “Let the bad omen reside only in three things; the house, the woman, and the animal.” The ancient Arabs were extremely superstitious on this subject; and even now the fear of a bad omen is universal, and pervades every transaction.

410.

عين لا تري قلب لا يكزن

(When) the eye does not see, the heart does not grieve.

Be not an eye-witness of misfortunes.

411.

علي قد الكسا مد رجليك

In proportion to the (length of) thy garment stretch out thy legs.

Accommodate thyself to the circumstances in which thou art placed. To stretch out one's leg beyond the cloak, so that any part of it should appear, is reckoned highly indecent and unmannerly among respectable persons in Eastern society. Before a superior the man who sits cross-legged must endeavour to hide even his feet and toes, in fact he must show no part of his body but the face. In the Egyptian dialect قدر is often used for قدر 412.

عدوتي غاسلتي

My enemy is the washer of my corpse.

I am thrown upon the mercy of my enemy. الغاسلة is the woman who washes the corpses of females previously to interment.

413.

عريان باسته و البخور تحته

Naked about his hinder parts, and perfume under them.

Although he has not money wherewith to purchase drawers, yet he has the vanity to perfume his hinder parts; while even the rich are content to perfume their beards. The vanity of living beyond one's station, and affecting airs of greatness, is very common among the Easterns of a low class; while on the contrary, those of the higher classes endeavour to conceal their wealth by living as poorly as is compatible with their rank.

414.

عقلا ما اختصموا

Wise men do not quarrel with each other.

415.

عداوة العاقل و لا صالحة الجاهل

The enmity of the wise, rather than the friendship of the fool.

416.

عند المخاضة يبان القليط

At the ford over the river the kalyt becomes conspicuous.

On certain occasions the bad qualities of a person must show themselves. مخاضة is a fording place where the water is shallow. The peasants in crossing over hold up their loose skirts, and on such occasions the kalyt (see No. 157,) becomes conspicuous.

417.

عند الشوي لف لف و عند لخل انا ضرسان

At the roasted meat "take, take;" but at the vinegar "my teeth ache."

He eagerly eats the roasted meat; but when vinegar is offered he says, "it makes my teeth ache." لف "to encircle, to cover, or wrap up." Here it means to wrap up the pieces of roast meat in some bread as is practised at dinners in the East, where every morsel taken from the dish is accompanied to the mouth with a piece of bread ; or, if possible, wrapped up in it. ضرسان is that unpleasant sensation of the teeth when we see anything repugnant to our nature or taste. Vinegar made of dates is used by the lower classes in summer ; they dip their bread into it.

عند البطون تذهب العقول

When the stomach is concerned, wisdom withdraws.

Wisdom is overpowered by hunger or dire necessity.

419.

عند المضيّق لا اخ و لا صديق

At the narrow passage there is no brother and no friend.

In dangerous cases we must only think of saving ourselves. المضيّق "a narrow pass," "a difficult moment."

420.

عيا تحفّف مجنونة

A blind woman shaves an insane one.

On improper persons employed in ridiculous affairs. تحفّف is derived from حفّ or تحفّف "the rubbing the skin of the face with the libán shámy as a depilatory to remove hairs. The libán shámy (لبان شامي) is a white shining gum of a glutinous quality, a kind of turpentine that is imported into Egypt from the islands of the Archipelago, particularly from Scio, where it is produced from a species of fir. It is used in a melted state, the finger being dipped into it and rubbed over the face, by which process all the hair to which it sticks is eradicated. The women of Cairo whose beauty is obscured by hair on the skin, avail themselves of this تحفيف 421.

علي عينك يا تاجر

To thy eye, O Merchant.

The whole is displayed before thee, therefore open thy eyes, for if thou art cheated in the business, it is now thy own fault.

422.

علي بخت زفاني قصر الليل و تابت المغاني

To the good luck of my wedding festivities the night was short, and the female singers became penitents.

This is said ironically to express that the wedding did not succeed well; and the saying is applied to any unfortunate circumstance that throws obstacles in the way of rejoicings. زفاف is the plural of زفة "the procession in which the bride is carried to the house of her spouse;" and it also signifies "the whole wedding-feast," the principal rejoicings of which take place during the night; and at Cairo always on the night preceding the consummation of matrimony, which last night is called ليلة الدخلة While I am writing this, the whole quarter of the city in which I reside is illuminated on a similar occasion ; and two men, one disguised as a French soldier, the other dressed up as a French woman, play their tricks before a large assembly of Arabs, in front of the bridegroom's house ; a third Arab personifies a cowardly Turkish soldier making love to the lady ; he, as well as the French pair, pronounce Arabic according to their supposed native idioms, a circumstance which causes roars of laughter. The mock-lady's heart is won by the Turkish soldier, whose pockets are full of gold ; but the French soldier beats the Turk unmercifully whenever he meets him, and at last obliges him to put on his hat instead of the turban. The female singers are mostly public women of a loose description ; those who were expected at the wedding feast suddenly felt symptoms of repentance (تابت), and therefore did not attend.

As certain customs usual on a Moslim wedding ceremony at Cairo have not been mentioned by former travellers, I shall here give some account of them. When a girl is to be asked in matrimony, a friend or relation, or the sheikh of the young man, (who has instructed him in reading the Korán,) goes to the girl's father, and makes a bargain for her. It is a real bargain, for the girl's affections are never consulted, and the amount of the price to be paid for her (حق البنت) as they call it,) is the only matter taken into consideration, provided the stations in life of both parties sufficiently correspond ; but even in this respect the Egyptians are not very scrupulous, and a man of low extraction and profession who possesses wealth often marries into a high class. The price paid for the girl to her father, or, if he be dead, to the nearest male relation, varies according to her rank, fortune, or reputation for beauty. Among the first-rate merchants the price is from two hundred to three hundred dollars; among those of the second class, from sixty to eighty; and the lower classes often pay no more than from three to five dollars. It is usual to pay half of the money immediately in advance, this sum becomes the property of the father; the other half remains in the bridegroom's hands, and reverts to his wife if he should die or divorce her; but if she herself sues for a divorce she forfeits her claim to the money. On the day of betrothing (يوم الخطبة) the girl's father gives a small entertainment in his house, where none assemble but intimate friends, the bridegroom himself not being present. The day for the marriage is then fixed. If any festivity is to take place (a circumstance with which the poorer classes generally dispense), the street wherein the bridegroom resides is for six or seven days before the marriage decorated with flags and various-coloured lamps, suspended from cords drawn across the street. Three days before the marriage ceremony the festivities usually begin; if the parties are great and rich people, they begin eight days before—the house is then full of company every night, and an open table is kept. But on the great night of the feast (that immediately preceding the nuptial night,) singing and dancing women are hired to attend, and the whole street is illuminated. Next morning when the nuptials are to take place (يوم الدخلة), (which in Egypt is always on Monday or Thursday, the other days being considered of bad omen with regard to weddings,) the girl's father repairs to the bridegroom's house, accompanied by some of his friends, in order to conclude the marriage compact (العقد); after a plentiful dinner the mutual friends assemble in a circle, the girl's father and the bridegroom sitting in the midst. The former takes the other's hand, and after the recital of a short prayer addresses him in these words: "I give to thee my daughter N * * *, the adult virgin, in marriage according to the law of God and of his prophet." زوجتك بنتي فولانة البكرة البالغة بسنة الله ورسوله عليه السلام To which the other replies: "I take thy daughter N * * * in marriage, the adult virgin, according to the law of God and of his prophet." The father asks, "Dost thou accept my daughter?" (اقبلت بنتي) The answer is, "I have accepted her." (قبلتها) The father immediately adds, "God bless thee with her." (الله يبارك لك فيها) And the bridegroom replies, "I hope in God that she may prove a blessing." (أميروك أن شاء الله) The Fatha (or first chapter of the Koran) is then recited by the whole company, and all present shake hands with the bridegroom, and congratulate him. No document or marriage contract is written on this occasion, nor even at the time of betrothing, when two witnesses only are required, to attest verbally the betrothing and the payment of the money. While this ceremony is taking place, the bride, having left her own house, and accompanied by all her female relations, proceeds through the town in a manner faithfully represented in a plate of Niebuhr's Travels. She is completely veiled, generally with a Cashmere shawl; a large canopy of red silk or cotton stuff, held by four men, is carried over her head; the musicians go before her. She parades through all the principal streets from morning till evening, for six or eight hours.*

When great people marry, these processions are conducted upon a more magnificent scale. I have seen many nuptial processions of persons high in office at the court of Mohammed Aly; the bride was seated in a carriage, and all the different trades and professions of the town appeared personified upon richly decorated open waggons drawn by horses; in these waggons the tradesmen and artists had established their shops, and sat working in the same manner as in their own regular abodes: sixty or seventy of those waggons followed the carriage of the bride. Before them went rope-dancers, harlequins, &c., and at their head was a masqued figure that is frequently seen parading in front of nuptial processions of an inferior order, and conducted with much less pomp and splendour; this figure is a young man whose head, arms, legs, and entire body are patched over with white cotton, so that no part of the skin can be perceived, his person appearing as if completely powdered over. He exhibits, in the natural position; that object which constituted the distinguishing attribute of the ancient Roman god of the gardens; this is of enormous proportion, two feet in length, and covered with cotton; and he displays it with indecent gesticulation in all the bázárs before the staring multitude, and during the whole time of the procession. How this custom, which is not known in other places, began among the Egyptians, I am unable to ascertain; but it seems not improbably some remnant of the worship paid by their forefathers to that god, whose temple at Karnak is the most considerable now existing in Egypt. Towards evening the bride arrives, half fainting from fatigue, before the gate of her spouse's dwelling, from which he issues, suddenly clasps her in his arms as if by violence, and running off with his fair prize carries her into the female's apartments up stairs, where all the women of both families are assembled. This evening is past with much fewer festivities than the last; there are not any public rejoicings in the streets, and none but the relations and intimate friends attend at supper. The bridegroom now in his turn leaves the house, he parades in his newest clothes, by the light of torches and to the sound of drums, a short way through the town, accompanied by his friends; he then goes to the Mosque, and recites the Aeshe, or last evening prayer, after which he returns to his home. As soon as he enters the house his friends leave him, but at parting strike him many times with their hands upon his back ; these blows he endeavours to avoid by running in as fast as possible. He is indulged with a short repose in his own apartment, and a message is then sent informing him that his bride is ready to receive him. He finds her in his bedchamber, sitting upon the sofa with two women by her side, usually the mother or aunt, and the old midwife of her family. It is here that for the first time her face is seen by the bridegroom, and his expectations are but too often disappointed. At his entrance the veil that covers her is removed by her attendants ; she then rises and kisses his hands. An invariable and indispensable custom now obliges the bridegroom to give money to both the female attendants, and likewise to put some money into the hands of his bride, this is called "the price for the uncovering of the face" (حق كشف الوجه). If his circumstances allow him, he generally gives gold coins : if he is poor, he gives a piastre, or even a few paras ; something, however, must be given, although a trifling sum, in testimony of the veil having been removed with the girl's consent. The two women then retire, and none remain but the bride and bridegroom. During this first nuptial "tête à tête" many women assemble before the door, striking drums, singing, and shouting loudly, to prevent from being heard any conversation that might pass between the newly married couple. On this occasion the bridegroom must convince himself that no man has anticipated him in the possession of the fair one, whom also he must no longer allow to boast of being a maiden (انه يخرقها). The mode in which he acquires that conviction is sometimes so repugnant to manly feelings, that I must describe it in a language better adapted than the English to a detail of similar proceedings. انما كثيرين من الناس تستغني في ذلك الوقت عن وطية البنت فياخرقوها باصبعهم و العامة يستعملوا ايضا مفتاح خشب حتي الفلاحين و ناس أسفلا لا يخرقوا البنت الا بالمفتاح بل يعيئوا كل الذين ما يفعلوا كذلك Before the bridegroom approaches his bride it is reckoned proper that he should utter aloud these words of the Koran : نصر من الله و فتح قريب Among the lower classes of Moslems at Cairo it is customary that on the day after the nuptials certain female relations of the bride should carry her innermost garment (not her handkerchief as some travellers have related,) in triumph to the houses of their neighbours. But this practise is not adopted by the more respectable inhabitants, among whom the chemise is exhibited only in the bridegroom's house to the women assembled there ; and in many instances the people of high rank condemn even this exhibition as indecent, and no longer allow it. On that night, immediately after the conclusion of their first interview, the bride and bridegroom retire to separate apartments ; next morning they go to the bath ; and for seven days after some female relations constantly remain with the bride in the house of her husband, but he is not permitted to approach her.

* In Syria, where this procession is accompanied with other ceremonies and usually takes place in the early part of the night, it is reckoned a very bad omen to pass with the bride before a public bath, and therefore those streets are carefully avoided into which the baths open.

The bride furnishes herself with clothes for the marriage, and with ornaments ; she brings likewise to her husband's house much furniture, bedding, kitchen utensils, &c. (called فراش) often of greater value than the price which was paid for her ; those articles continue her property.

If a widow marries, none of those ceremonies take place ; the nuptials are celebrated in a quiet manner by the family alone. Even the marriage of a virgin is sometimes not accompanied by any festivities, but for this omission an express stipulation must be made at the time of betrothing ; else the bride and her friends would consider themselves insulted.

It is always expected that those who are invited to nuptials should bring some presents ; sugar, coffee, and wax candles, are the articles generally sent on such occasions to the bridegroom's house, upon a large board covered with a fine handkerchief.

Divorces are extremely common at Cairo ; I believe there are few individuals who have not divorced one wife. Polygamy is much less frequent than Europeans imagine. Of one hundred married men in this city there certainly is not more than one who has two wives ; and not more than one in five hundred who has more than two. The privilege of having four, which the Moslim law allows, is enjoyed by the richest class only, those who can afford to keep separate establishments.

To estimate the condition of the Arab women at Cairo, by that reported to exist at Constantinople and in the large Turkish towns, would be very erroneous. Females probably enjoy more freedom here at Cairo than in any other part of the Turkish empire, the deserts excepted; and whether for that reason, or from some accessory causes, they are of less reserved manners, and more addicted to debauchery than the women of the neighbouring countries, Syria and Hedjáz.

عمر الكذاب قصير

The liar is short-lived (soon detected).

424.

علي المؤمن ان يؤذن

It is the business of the Mueddin to call to prayers.

There are appropriate persons for the performance of every business. علي sometimes means "the business of," "belonging to." Thus it is said, هذا عليّ "this is my business or duty to perform," "this obligation devolves upon me."

425.

عيش يا حمار حتي ينبت النوار

Live, thou ass, until the clover sprouts up.

Exhorting a foolish person to be patient and not to despond, as it is quite certain that circumstances will change for the better.

426.

علموني كيف اهاجركم قالوا خلينا و روح

Teach me how I can depart from you. Let us alone, they said, and begone.

Said of a person fondly imagining that he is dear to people who do not care about him.

عاشر المصلي و عاشر المغني تغني

Live with him who prays, and thou prayest ; live with the singer, and thou singest.

عفاشة و تلاشة و بقبة و حاشة

A miserable disorderly slut talks proudly and affects prudery.

عفاشة comes from the term عفش—which in the Egyptian dialect signifies “miserable baggage,” “trumpery;” thus they say عفش نفش meaning a “deal of rubbish and trumpery.” The word نفش is a cant term employed only in this phrase, and without any real signification, but it serves to rhyme with عفش (See No. 146 and No. 319.) In a wider sense عفش means also “baggage in general,” “parcels of goods.” تلاشة from the word متلاشي “thrown about,” “disorderly,” “worthless.” بقبة an imitative word expressing the gurgling sound which water produces in passing through the narrow opening of earthen jars when poured out. From this is derived its figurative sense, the talking loud, and also babbling. وحاشة from يوحش "to abstract one's self from society," "to neglect one's friends," "to behave towards them with reserve and affected airs."

429.

عمي القط و كان بشهوة الفار

The cat became blind yet still was hankering after mice.

430.

عمارة البيت و لا خرابه

To keep the family in good condition, not to destroy it.

When the words عمارة and خرابة refer to بيت (a house or family), عمارة means "to keep the family in a good state by letting the mother live with her husband and children;" and خرابة means "to ruin the family by divorcing the mother and obliging her to quit the house." خَرَبَ البيت is likewise used when the father of a family dies.

431.

عازب و يضارب ما يخلّي له صاحب

Unmarried, quarrelsome, and retaining no friend.

Said of one whose manners are repulsive.

432.

عريان و في كفه ميزان

(Half) naked and a balance in his hand.

Miserable, still laying claim to the habits of the wealthy. عريان does not here properly mean "naked," but "half-naked," "in rags." The substantial merchants of Cairo frequently carry a small balance in their wide sleeves, to weigh the sequins and other gold coins which they receive in payment.

433.

علمناه الشكّاة سبّنا علي الابواب

We taught him begging, and (now) he has the start of us at the gates.

The pupil excelling his master. See No. 350, for شكّاة

434.

عصيدة من طمبيخ ام علي

A pap of the cookery of Om Aly.

To express a thing prepared with great care and nicety. عصيدة is a pap made of meal, butter, and water, much used among the negroes and also among the peasants. ام علي a woman's name; as women are often called by the name of their favourite child, usually the first-born son.

435.*

عيبت القدر علي المغرفة قالت يا سودة يا محارفة

The kettle reproached the kitchen spoon. "Thou blackee," he said, "thou idle babbler."

Of those who reprove others for faults of which they themselves are more guilty. المغرفة is a large wooden kitchen spoon. يحارف has not in Egypt always the literal signification, but means "to talk idly," "to give bad advice," "to delude a person by shrewd words."

436.

عواض خطوطك و الحمرة امسحي عماشك يا بظرة

Instead of thy (fine) tattoo and thy painting, wipe off the dirt from thy face, thou hussey.

Do what is right and necessary before thou thinkest of what is merely ornamental. خطوط so is called the tattooing of the female peasants and those of the lower classes in general; this is produced by incisions made along the forehead and temples, disposed in separate lines, but never forming any regular figures. الحمرة is the red colour, with which the gay women paint their hands and feet; it is made either of Henna or of Cinnabar. In the Egyptian dialect عماش means "dirt in the eye," (and likewise, "soreness of the eye"). بظرة is an insulting expression, equivalent to "slut or wench." It originally signifies —labia pudendorum, quæ a Cahirinis etiam زنبور dicuntur, et in puellis exciduntur.

437.

عناق الاجتماع أطيب من عناق الوداع

The embrace at meeting is better than that at parting.

438.

عينه في الطبق و اذنه لمن زعق

His eye upon the cupboard, his ear towards the crier (of things for sale in the street).

Applied to a greedy glutton. طبق is a board or shelf in a room whereon eatables, especially fruits and sweetmeats, are deposited. لمن زعق "to him who cries," viz., cries victuals, fruit, &c., for sale; it is here put for في من زعق

439.

عين الشمس لم تتغطي

The eye of the sun cannot be hidden.

Superior excellence or beauty will become known, notwithstanding every effort made to conceal them. عين الشمس and شمس are often said indifferently; it also means the body of the sun, or the solar rays. This proverb is taken from a poem in praise of wine, beginning with the following verses:—

الراح المدام القرقف البكر العجوز الشمطا
غطوها الندامة قالت عين الشمس لم تتغطي

In the first line there are six different terms expressing wine.

440.

عير و استعير هذا هو العار الكبير

Borrow and lend out (what thou hast borrowed), that is the great shame.

This is a verbal play on the different meanings of عار and عير

441.

عرس و في طرفه ختان

A wedding, and by its side a circumcision (feast).

A surplus or superabundance of rejoicings. The term طهارة is more commonly used in Egypt than ختان. To save expense the Egyptians frequently celebrate these two festivals at the same time, when an opportunity of doing so presents itself.

442.

عين القلادة و راس التخت و أول الجريدة و نكتة المسألة
و بيت القصيدة

*The jewel of the necklace, the canopy of the throne, the vanguard of the army, the point in discourse,
the best verse of the poem.*

The “eye of the necklace” (عين القلادة) is the precious stone, or medallion, or gold coin, which hangs upon the breast, from the middle of a woman’s necklace, to attract particular notice. تجريدة or جريدة “an army or large body of troops in actual warfare;” thus, التجريدة علي الوهابي “the army against the Waháby." أول الجريدة is the "head or vanguard of the army, composed of the bravest soldiers." نكتة المسألة "the very point or most material part of the question under discussion." بيت القصيدة so is styled the verse (بيت) wherein the poet has exerted his utmost powers; the main verse of the poem, usually found towards the end of those compositions called Kasýde.

443.

عصارة لؤم في قارورة خبث

A dirty liquor in a wretched bottle.

A bad character and unseemly body. عصارة a liquid extracted by pressure from whatever source it may be. قارورة the same as قزاة a "glass bottle."

444.

عليه ما عليّ الطبل يوم العيد

May that come upon him which comes upon the drum on the feast-day.

Much beating; verbatim, "to him what to the drum on the day of festival."

445.

عليه ما عليّ المحصنات من العذاب

May those torments be his which are the due of the adulteresses.

May he suffer stoning. Here is to be understood الزانيات or those women whom the Koran condemns to be stoned (ترجم).

446.

عليه ما علي اصحاب السبت

May that be his lot which is the lot of the Sabbath men.

The Sabbat men, or the Jews, are doomed to hell fire by the Koran. All these imprecations are in common and frequent use.

447.

الاعمى يخري فوق السطح و يظن ان الناس لا يروه

The blind man does what is nasty upon the roof of the house, and thinks that the people do not see him.

Said of a blockhead who fancies that the world is unacquainted with his foolish tricks, however openly he practises them. The meaning of فوق السطح is properly "above the roof or terrace of the house;" but it is constantly used to express "upon the terrace."

العادة توم الطبيعة

Custom is the twin of the innate character.

(See No. 133.)

449.

اعز من منخ البعوض

More rare than fly-brains.

Said of any thing very scarce. بعوض means originally (as here) "a fly"; but in the common dialect of Egypt this name is given to a sort of vermin that stick to the beards of filthy peasants, and are also called صيبان

450.

اعز من انف الاسد

Scarcer than the nose of the lion.

Said of a rare thing, because it is difficult to take a lion by the nose.

451.

اعلق من قراد

More adhesive than a tick.

Said of a person whom one cannot shake off. قراد is a species of tike (or tick); these creatures attach themselves firmly to the body (especially to the belly) of a camel, and annoy him extremely.

452.

اعدل من الميزان

More just than a balance.

453.

العز في نواصي الخيل

Honour (resides) in the manes of horses.

This is taken from the saying of Mohammed, الخير معقود بنواصي الخيل and is often quoted to show the superior distinction which a horseman claims above him who rides upon an ass. نواصي properly signifies the lock of hair that falls on the horse's forehead.

454.

عذر لم يتولي الحق نسجه

It is an excuse the texture of which is not truth's own work.

Said of a false excuse. The construction is الحق يتولي In the Egyptian dialect يتولي often means "to do a thing by one's self," "by one's own labour," equivalent to الفعل بالنفس—نسج or ينسج "to weave." A more common term for weaving is قَرَر and a weaver is called قَزَار in Egypt.

حرف الغين

455.

غابت السباع و لعبت الصباع

The lions withdrew, the hyænas then played.

A verse which is frequently quoted conveys the same meaning :

و اذا خلا الميدان من اسد
رقص ابن عرس و زمزم النمس

*And when the lion has cleared the field,
The ferret dances and the Ichneumon sings.*

ابن عرس or عرس is a species of small weasel or ferret very common in Egypt; it comes into the houses, feeds upon meat, is of a gentle disposition although not to be domesticated, and full of play and gambols. النمس is the Ichneumon rat, that has a sharp shrill voice. زم زم in the Egyptian dialect, means "to sing," "to recite a poem."

456.

غرامة بينة ولا ربح بطي

A clear loss rather than a profit of distant expectation.

457. *

غَلًّا و سَوَ كِيل

Scarcity and bad (corn) measuring.

Bad times and bad men.

458.

غراب قال الله حق قال بقي نباش الخرا واعظ

A crow exclaimed "God is the truth;" "then," quoth one, "the dirt scraper has become a preacher."

بقي is a kind of expletive often used in Egypt, sometimes meaning "there," "therefore," "altogether," or "in short;" but at other times it has not any signification whatever and is quite superfluous. (See No. 263.) يَبْش "to search upon the ground," "to dig it slightly," "to scrape, or scratch it."

459.

غلام كفاية لا جامكية و لا جراية

A boy-servant of all work, without food or wages.

Said in reference to the unwillingness of a person to reward those who have served him well. كفاية "sufficient," i.e., for all the work required in the house. جامكية is the common term in Egypt for wages or monthly pay. جراية in the Egyptian dialect signifies the daily allowance of victuals given to soldiers, labourers, servants, &c.

460.

غيرة الغاحبة زنا و غيرة الحرّة بكّا

The jealousy of the harlot (is evinced by) adultery, that of the virtuous woman (by) weeping.

461.

غبن الصديق و لا مصاحبة العدو

Anger with our friend, rather than constant friendship with our enemy.

غبن "to be angry with," "to quarrel with." The expression انا مغبون منه "I am angry with him," is often heard.

462.

غدوة في الصعيد ما هي بعيد

The dinner is in Upper Egypt—it is not far off.

This is said in ridicule of the parasites (طفيل) who run from one end of the town to the other for the sake of a good dinner.

463.

غيرة المرأة مفتاح طلاقها

The jealousy of a wife is the key to her divorce.

464.

غنا بلا نقوط شبه ميت بلا حنوط

Singing without remuneration is like a dead body without perfumes.

When the singing women perform in Egypt they collect money from all the persons present, the landlord or host as well as the guests ; and according to custom, one of them proclaims with a loud voice the sum which each person puts on the plate, mentioning at the same time the donor's name ; this custom excites the vanity of those who form the company, each from a kind of emulation in liberality wishing to have his own name mentioned as the most generous ; this heightens the interest and pleasure of the society, and fills the pockets of the singers. نقوط signifies the money given to the singers by the company. حنوط is a mixture of camphor and rose-water, with which the face of a dead person is sprinkled before the body is placed in the coffin.

465.

غريمي اقصر مني

My debtor is still more backward in payment than I am myself.This is said in excuse for our not paying a debt, as our own debtor does not pay us. غريم in the Egyptian dialect means the debtor and also the creditor. مقاصر is here used in the same sense as مقاصر which means in Egypt one who is backward in paying, or generally remiss in doing what is his duty.

466.

غدي مأكامير و لا تعشي سكاري

Give dinner to the drunken—but not supper to the tipsy.

The drunken, it is supposed, will become sober in the evening; but the tipsy during supper will be intoxicated and continue so all night. مأكامير “a man completely drunk.” ساكر or سكران “one who is tipsy.” رجل في النشوة “a person clouded or stupified with wine,” being the first stage of drunkenness. This expression corresponds exactly to the German “benebelt.”

467.

غضبه علي طرف مناخيره

His anger is on the edge of his nose.

Ever ready to burst forth. مناخير properly signifies nostrils, but is used constantly in Egypt for nose, or أنف—a term seldom heard there in familiar conversation.

468.

غاص غوصة و جا بروشة

He plunged a (deep) plunge, and came up with a piece of dung.

 حرف الفاء

469.

فار ما وسعه شقه حطا في قعره مرزبة

A mouse feared that her hinder part was not sufficiently wide ; they then introduced an iron pestle.

On remedies that cause an evil worse than that for which they are applied. قعر is a low word for است &c., more politely expressed by است. The word مرزبة means a thick heavy iron club held by both hands, and used by the public coffee-roasters to pound the roasted beans in large mortars.

470.

فقما و تشرب ملوخيا

She has a distorted mouth and drinks Meloukhya.

She does a thing seldom done by others, although she is less qualified for doing so than others. فقما "with a distorted mouth." The pot-herb meloukhya is boiled with meat till it forms a thick broth, of which the Egyptians are very fond ; they eat it with a spoon or dip their bread into it, but few drink the thick broth, and the woman with a distorted mouth has the least claim to do so, because she will probably spill it, being scarcely able to drink mere water without letting some fall about. The ʾ at the end of فقما and ملوخيا is according to the pronunciation of the lower classes of Cairo, by which a strong accent is laid upon the ʾ at the end of feminine nouns.

فَدَّانٌ يَكْرَمُ بِقَصْبَةٍ

A feddán may have a kassaba bestowed in its favour.

A trifling thing may be sacrificed in favour of a great one. It would have been better Arabic thus : قَصْبَةٌ يَكْرَمُ لِفَدَّانٍ The feddán is an Egyptian land measure, of which the extent differs according to the various departments of the revenue :

“Feddán el kamel,” or “el Djerkasy,” is composed of 400 square rods or kassabas, and is computed at 24 kerats; the kassaba being an imaginary portion of the division which comprises 24 kerats, and used on many occasions.

Feddán of $333\frac{1}{3}$ square kassabas or 20 kerats.

Feddán of 300 kassabas or 18 kerats; this is the feddán most used at present. The kassaba that composes it has $3\frac{64}{100}$ metres. But this kassaba, or rod, which the surveyors now use in measuring out the sown fields every year, according to the new regulations of Mohammed Ali Pasha, (who has abolished the land taxes assessed upon villages, or districts at large, and now takes throughout the country the miri from each feddán), this rod, I say, is often changed, i.e. shortened, to cheat the peasants, and every two or three years an inch is lopped off from it. The poor fellah is little aware of this diminution at the moment, but he has, however, found out that at present (in 1817) the kassaba used is only three-fourths of what it was twelve years ago under the Mamelouks, although the feddán for which they pay the tax still contains the same number of rods. The manner in which the kassaba itself is measured favours a deception of this kind. Immemorial custom has decided that it ought to consist of twenty-four fists (قبضة), meaning such as are formed in seizing a stick with the hand and keeping the thumb erect upon it, thus—

No exact measure has ever been determined, and it may be easily conceived that government does not choose the largest hands to fix the length of the rod. In 1816, the kassaba had about $6\frac{1}{3}$ Cairo pikes. The peasants are so stupid, or so negligent, that perhaps they seldom discover the cheat, or think it of little moment ; besides, they respect it as a custom of their forefathers. The shortening of the kassaba by an inch, probably makes an increase in the receipts of the Fiscus of from £20,000 to £30,000 sterling per annum. This is one of the numerous tricks and secret measures by which government curtails the fellah's pittance without incurring the blame of open tyrannical extortion.

According to the latest data there are about 2,000,000 of feddán now under actual cultivation in Egypt, (of which five-sixths are sown with grain). Then 2,000,000 of feddán at the rate of $3\frac{2}{3}$ or 4 dollars annual tax per feddán, (as it may be now computed,) gives a land revenue of at least 7,000,000 of dollars to the Pasha of Egypt ; a sum that forms, I believe, little more than half of his income.

As I have mentioned the subject of taxation in Egypt, it may gratify the reader to lay before him an accurate statement of the proportion which the land tax bears to the field income of the cultivator in this country. The following is an account of the expenditure on a field near Esne, in Upper Egypt, and the produce of it in winter 1813-1814. It must be recollected that in the higher parts of Egypt the Nile never inundates the ground, but that the fields are irrigated in high-water time either by means of wheels, or of buckets worked by men, who draw the water up from the river.

A society of twenty-six peasants had hired a piece of ground, comprising seventeen feddáns, of which fourteen were destined for durra, and three for water-melons ; it being the custom of poor fellahs, who have not any landed property of their own, to associate every year and hire a field.

Expenses incurred in the Cultivation of Seventeen Feddâns.

For three months twenty of the associates were occupied in drawing up water from the river in buckets, which they emptied into the small channels made to convey the water into the field. This labour was continued incessantly during the whole day until the durra approached to maturity. Those who could not themselves attend, were obliged to send in their stead labourers hired for the purpose. Besides these twenty men, two were employed in keeping the channels clear of mud and weeds ; two others in partitioning the water at its issue from the channels over the field ; and one man superintended the whole of the labourers, and excited them to exertion. The sheikh, or head man of the company, was alone exempt from contributing his share of actual work.

Piasters.

The daily labour of a fellah in drawing the bucket (which is of a more fatiguing nature than the hardest field work in Europe), was then estimated in Esne at fifteen paras, of which ten were reckoned as pay in cash, and five paras for food, (viz., lentils, oil or durra cakes,) thus making the labour of each man during the three months amount to the value of thirty-four piasters ; or for the whole . . . 850

After the conclusion of those three months, when the clusters of the durra (called then فتاديل) were nearly ripe, five or six persons were employed in watching the crop of durra as well as the melon field, to guard them from nightly robbers, and from the multitude of sparrows and other small birds, which often, in spite of every precaution, deprive the fellah of the whole fruit of his labours. The daily pay of these men is estimated at twelve paras, or sixty for them all, during two months, until the durra harvest in February or March . . . 90

For the construction of water-buckets and the poles to which they are suspended, and which facilitate the operation of drawing them up . . . 4

Seed (تقاوي) of 14 feddâns of durra, at one rafter per feddân, makes $3\frac{1}{2}$ mud for the whole, or . . . $2\frac{1}{2}$

Seed for three feddâns of melon field . . . 1

Labour of throwing the durra seed . . . 3

Labour of planting the melon seed . . . 2

Produce of Seventeen Feddâns.Piasters.

The water-melons of the three feddâns, sold in the market of Esne at from two to three paras each 280

Each of the associates for his own eating from off the field about sixty paras 40

For about three months the associates cut every day weeds and grass from the durra and melon field, which they divided among them every evening; part of the weeds and grass they sold at the market of Esne for feeding horses, camels, and asses in that town; part of them they gave to their own sheep and goats;
and part was taken away from them forcibly every morning, by the soldiers of the garrison.
The daily share of each associate may be computed at from six to seven paras, making for the three months about fifteen piasters per head 390

When the grain was divided every associate carried home four and-a-half tellys, or forty mud soogy, worth at that time thirty-two paras per mud, or thirty-two piasters for the share of each; in all 832

The dry durra stalks, which after the harvest fall to the share of each individual, and of which the leaves are given to the cattle as food in the summer months, the canes of them being used for fuel or for thatching, were worth about four piasters; or in the whole 104

Piasters.

Each associate besides fattened at home with the dry durra leaves a couple of sheep, which he could sell afterwards with a profit of about three piasters per head ; we may say six piasters for each individual ; or in the whole . 156

TOTAL PRODUCE of the field—piasters 1802

I must here observe that the durra harvest had been bad, because a high wind and heavy rain in November had bent or broken the stalks of the plant ; otherwise the produce of the field might have been 1000 piasters in durra, instead of 832 ; the water having been very abundant this year. However, two or three years seldom elapse without some calamity equally distressing as heavy rain ; either innumerable flights of birds, worms in the ground, or low water, which adds considerably to the labour and expense of irrigation, are circumstances that cause a great diminution in the produce : for those misfortunes, if the crop does not entirely fail, government never makes the smallest allowance.

Piasters.

Total produce 1802

Total expense 993½

Clear produce 808½

The taxes of this year were twenty-nine piasters per each feddán of durra and melons, which are usually sown together, making in all 493

Remained to the fellahs, taxes deducted }
 —piasters } 315½

The income of a feddán (taxes deducted) was therefore $18\frac{1}{2}$ piasters.

Each of the associates had for his share twelve piasters, after having worked during the whole winter season. As the durra fields are very seldom (if ever) sown twice in Upper Egypt, the man had to support himself during the rest of the year either by joining some other society to sow summer seed, or by hiring himself out as a labourer.

The produce of the corn field is better, although the seed produces much less, because corn does not require such long continued or incessant labour of irrigation. At the same period, the produce of a corn field near Esne, was 84 piasters per feddán; the expenses may be calculated at 15 piasters, and the taxes laid upon corn fields were then $40\frac{1}{2}$ piasters; there remained a clear profit of 29 piasters.

The corn measures of Upper Egypt are the erdeb and the tellys. The erdeb has 12 muds, or 24 kadahs, or 48 raftans. The tellys has 16 muds. Of the mud there are two kinds, the mud el shoone (or the granary mud), and the mud el soogy (or souky), the market mud; 16 of the mud el shoone make 9 mud el soogy. The seed of the 14 feddáns of durra was $3\frac{1}{2}$ mud soogy. The produce yielded 40 muds for each associate, or 1040 for the whole, which makes 297 for each mud of seed. The durra is usually reckoned at 300 for 1 of seed. The corn produce at Esne in middling years 25 from 1; in the better ground of the neighbouring plains of Thebes, it produces 35 for 1.

The present system of government is to oblige the peasants to sow the whole ground belonging to their village, whether good or bad, whether elevated or not, and therefore, whether irrigable or not. The bad ground is then partitioned out amongst the cultivators, and they must pay the taxes from it in the same proportion as from the good. Of late all the peasants' cattle has likewise been taxed, and they are to pay the tithes from it, a thing never before known in Egypt, and I believe, unknown in any other part of the Turkish dominions. The grain which they do not want for their own families, they are not at liberty to sell at pleasure, but must let government have it at a fixed price. The erdeb of durra was then worth at Esne $5\frac{3}{4}$ piasters 1 Spanish dollar = 8 piasters ; 1 piaster = 40 paras.

فم يسبح و يد تذبج

A mouth that prays, a hand that kills.

On hypocrites.

473.

في الزوايا خبايا

In the corners are hidden treasures,

Wealth is sometimes found where least expected. خبايا plural of زاوية "the corner of a building." "hidden treasures," a word of frequent use.

474.

فرّ من المطر قعد تحت المزرّاب

He fled from the rain, and sat down under the water-spout.

475.

فرد كلمة تكفي العاقل

One single word only is sufficient for the wise.

فرد instead of واحد is much used in the Syrian dialect ; not so frequently in the Egyptian.

476.*

في كل رأس حكمة

In every head is some wisdom.

477.

في بردعته مسلة

In his jackass-saddle sticks a needle.

Secret vexations plague him. بردعة the saddle for asses used in Egypt. مسلة a long iron packing needle, used likewise in sewing the saddle.

478.

فريخ البط عوام

The young ones of the duck are swimmers.

Young minds are inflamed by example. عوم or يعوم in the common Egyptian dialect, signifies "to swim." يسبح is likewise used, but not frequently.

479.

في الطبقة الوسطانية يعبس الغوثانيين و يضط علي التحتانيين
(Standing) in the middle window, he tickles the hinder parts of those who sit in the upper window, and insults (by offensive noises) those in the lower window.

He behaves with vulgarity and indecency to people above and below him. طبقة among many significations means "a window." يعبس in the Egyptian dialect, "to tickle the hinder parts of a person ;" it has also another sense.

480.

فلان حج قال و من ناكسه يجاور
Such a man performed the pilgrimage. "Yes," quoth one, "and for his bad doings remains resident at Mekka."

يجاور to become a neighbour either of the Beitullah of Mekka, or of the Mosque of Medina, or any other celebrated mosque ; or to reside there for some time, which is regarded as very meritorious.
 Those persons, especially foreigners, who attend lectures in a mosque, are for that reason called مجاورين Thus at Cairo the neighbours of the Azhar (مجاورين الازهر) are far famed.

481.*

فقر و حاقة ما يتفق

Poverty and anger do not agree.

The poor must have pliant tempers. حاقة in Egypt means "anger;" it is sometimes used, but not often, for "folly."

482.

فوطه بحواشي و ما تحتها شي

A napkin with (fine) borders and nothing under it.

Puff without reality. Presents to people of high rank are often placed upon a board or plate, and covered with fine embroidered towels or handkerchiefs (فوطه).

483.

فقرا ويمشوا مشي الاسرا

They are paupers, and walk about with the air of grandees.

484.

فرحنا بالنيل جا النيل غرقنا

We rejoiced at (the rising of) the Nile; the Nile came and we were drowned.

485.

في راسه صوت لا بد ما يزعقه

He has a voice in his head, and will certainly give it utterance.

A person follows his inclination or natural propensities. The saying is originally applied to a jackass that brays notwithstanding the severest beating.

486.

في كل يوم يزداد ابن آدم عقل جديد

Every day man increases in new understanding.

487.

فَرَّغَ الْعَرَسِ بِمَرْقَةٍ وَ لَبَسَ كُلُّ وَاحِدٍ خُلُقَهُ

The wedding with its broth (i.e. the entertainments) concluded; and then every one put on his rags.

When disguise is no longer necessary or advantageous the natural character is resumed. At weddings even the poorest people dress, if not in their own, at least in fine clothes borrowed for the occasion. خُلِفَ "a torn cloth," "a rag."

فَارَقَعَ مِنَ السَّقْفِ قَالَ لَهُ الْقَطُّ بِسْمِ اللَّهِ قَالَ أَبْعِدْ أَنْتَ عَنِّي

A mouse fell from the roof. "Come, take some refreshment," said the cat. "Stand thou off," she replied.

Mistrust any offer of assistance from the enemy. بِسْمِ اللَّهِ is used as an invitation to partake of food, &c. To decline it the reply is هَنِيئًا "May it be wholesome food to thee!" أَبْعِدْ عَنِّي a common expression implying with harshness "keep off," "stand off."

489.

أَفْسَدَ مِنَ الْأَرْضَةِ

(He is) of more corrupt doings than the moth.

الْأَرْضَةُ is the moth that feeds upon clothes, books, furniture, &c.

490.

فِي كَفِّهِ رَقِيَّ ابْلِيسَ مِفْتَاحُ

The enchantments of the devil are (only) a key in his hand.

رَقِيَّ plural of رَقِيَّة "a charm," "enchantment." The saying is addressed to a malicious sorcerer. The dealing in charms and incantations is extremely common throughout Egypt. There is not any village, however small, in which they may not be obtained from the fakyh, or village priest.

491.*

فَرَّ مِنَ الْمَوْتِ وَ فِي الْمَوْتِ وَقَعَ

He fled from death, and fell into it.

492.*

فَرَّ اخْزَاهُ اللَّهُ خَيْرٌ مِنْ قَتْلٍ يَرْجُهُ اللَّهُ

"He fled, disgrace upon him!" is better than, "He was slain, God have mercy upon him!"

Said in derision of cowardly soldiers. The expression اخْزَاكَ اللَّهُ or, as they likewise say in Egypt يَخْزِيكَ اللَّهُ is very common.

493.

فَوْقَ كُلِّ طَآمَّةٍ طَآمَّةٌ

Upon every misfortune another misfortune.

One misfortune after another.

الفضل للمبتدي وان احسن المقتدي

The merit belongs to the beginner, should even the successor do better.

To the same purport is a phrase often used الفضل للمتقدم "the merit belongs to the predecessor."
This is taken from the subjoined beautiful verses, celebrated among the Arabs, and inserted by Harírí into the Introduction of his Makamát, assigning thereby the merit for that species of poetry to his predecessor Hamadáni, surnamed Bedīya e Zamán.
They have been ascribed to several poets, but were probably composed by Ibn Malek Ibn e'Rakaa, of Damascus, who lived in the eighth century of the Christian era.

فلو قبل مَبْكَاهَا بَكَيت صَابَةً
بسعدني شغيت القلب قبل التندّم
ولكن بكت قبلي فهبّيج لي البكا
بكاهها فقلت الفضل للمتقدم

*If before she herself wept, love for Sada had caused my tears to flow,
I should have lightened my heart before repentance
(choked it);
But she wept first, her tears excited mine,
The merit, I cried, belongs to the predecessor.*

 حرف الغاف

495.

قاحبة مستورة و لا حرة مبهرجة

A decent public woman, rather than an indecent honest woman.

Bedouin blood. Among themselves they assume the name of Baramake or Barmeky (برمكي), by which, however, they are less generally known than by that of Ghowázy. They boast that their origin is derived from the celebrated Barmeky (or Barmecide) family, the viziers of Haroun er' Rasheed; but in what manner any descent can be traced to them, why they emigrated to Egypt, and how they chose to adopt their vile profession, not one of them knows. They usually marry among themselves, at least the males never marry any girl but a Barmeky; and few of the Barmeky females condescend to take a husband of any other tribe. All their females, without exception, are educated for the purpose of prostitution. Their law is, that a girl, as soon as she is marriageable, must yield to the embraces of a stranger, and soon after be married to a young man of her own tribe. Thus the husband is never permitted to receive his bride in a state of virgin purity; but the Ghowázy father sells the first favours of his daughter to a stranger, making a bargain with the highest bidder, generally in presence of the sheikh of the village, or chief of the town, in which the parties reside. These women, and all the females of this tribe marry, immediately after the nuptial ceremony, receive the visits of any man who presents himself, while the husband performs the duties of a menial servant in the family; he is also the musician who plays when his wife dances in public, and is consequently employed in seeking for persons who may be induced to visit his wife, with whom he himself cohabits only by stealth; for a Ghazye would think herself disgraced, or at least would be exposed to the sneers of the sisterhood, if it were known that she admitted her husband to any familiarity or participation in the enjoyment of her charms. Among them, I have reason to believe, (but am not certain,) that the Ghazy (so the male is called) has but one wife. The men never follow any profession; they are neither cultivators, nor traders, nor artists; the dealing in asses, of which they rear an excellent breed, being the only branch of industry to which they apply themselves, besides the sale of their partners' charms. They are as much despised as their females are distinguished and often honoured; the birth of a male child is considered by a Ghazye as a great misfortune, because he is an unprofitable article—a mere incumbrance—and the whole male sex look up to the females for food, clothes, and protection. The Ghowázys have in every town or considerable village a small quarter assigned to them, where they live in large huts or tents, seldom in houses; never associating with other public women, whom they regard as much inferior to themselves in rank. They are generally, but not always, dancers and singers, and as such many travellers have seen and admired them. Like true Bedouins they are constantly moving about, either paying visits to the sisterhood established in neighbouring places, attending the country fairs, or the camps of the troops. They have made it a law among them, never to refuse the embraces of any person, whatever may be his condition, so that he pays: at country fairs, therefore, the most fashionable Ghazyeh, glittering with gold, will admit the visit of any clown or fellah for a sum not exceeding twopence. Some of them have accumulated considerable wealth and keep great establishments. Half-a-dozen black female slaves, (the profits of whose prostitution they claim as their own property,) two or three dromedaries, as many horses, half-a-dozen asses, are not unfrequently seen in one family; while the dress and ornaments of those females, consisting in gold-embroidered silk gowns, and many chains of sequins that hang about the head, neck, and breast, with heavy golden bracelets, are sometimes worth from two to three hundred pounds sterling. In features they may be distinguished from the common Egyptians, and appear to bear traces of Arabian origin, especially in their fine aquiline noses. Their beauty is famous throughout Egypt; the greater number, however, cannot be reckoned handsome, yet I have seen some that might have served as models of Phryne for a painter; their skin not being browner than that of the inhabitants of southern Europe. Instances are not uncommon of a Ghazyeh marrying a village sheikh, especially of the Howara Arabs settled in Upper Egypt, who consider it an honour to carry off so fair a prize, nor would the Ghazyeh bestow herself in matrimony on any common peasant. But these instances only occur when the Ghazyeh has lost her husband, or divorced him, and has become tired of her mode of life, in the outset of which she can never be induced to renounce her hereditary profession. When such an event is to take place, the Ghazye, before she marries the sheikh, makes a solemn vow upon the tomb of some saint never to be unfaithful to her new husband, and sacrifices a sheep in honour of that patron. I have been assured on good authority that no Ghazye married under these circumstances was ever known to violate her vow. The number in Egypt is very considerable; I believe that they may be fairly estimated, males and females, at from six to eight thousand persons. Their principal settlements are in the towns of the Delta, and in Upper Egypt at Kenne, where they have a colony of at least three hundred individuals. On the great festival of the Saint el Bedowy, at Tanta in the Delta, (which is celebrated three times every year,) an hundred thousand persons sometimes crowd together from all parts of Egypt, to perform a pilgrimage resembling in many respects that of Mekka, which swallows up the savings collected by the poorer classes of Cairo. At one of those festivals I have seen above six hundred Ghazye assembled in tents pitched about the town. Some of the most wealthy Ghazye perform the pilgrimage to Mekka themselves in great state, and assume ever after the honourable title of Hadjy, not changing however their mode of life. The Ghowázys are protected by the government of Egypt, to which they pay an annual capitation tax. In the time of the Mamelouks their influence in the open country was very considerable, and the protection of a Ghazyé was courted by many respectable persons. The Arnaut soldiers, who are at present masters of Egypt, have plundered several and killed others in fits of jealousy, so that many have fled from the garrison towns into the open country. They have a custom in Upper Egypt, on the feast-day after Ramadhan, of paying visits to all the first people of the town or village, when they dance for a few minutes in the court-yard of the house and receive a present at parting. Their behaviour towards those who do not meddle with them is much less indecent than might be imagined; but woe to him whose affections they captivate! At every place where they are numerous one of them is regarded as head of their community, and assumes the title of "Emeer el Nezel" (الأمير النزل), or "chief of the settlement;" which, however, does not invest her with any authority over the others. At Cairo itself their number is but small; they live all together in a large khan, called Hosh Bardak, just below the castle. In a city where among women of every rank chastity is so scarce as at Cairo, it could not be expected that public prostitution should thrive.

The Ghowázys have established among themselves a vocabulary of the most common nouns and phrases, in which they are able to converse without being understood by those who visit them.

There is another tribe of public women in Egypt called Halebye (حلبية), they are fewer in numbers than the Ghowázys, but like them intermarry among themselves. The men are tinkers, and horse or ass doctors; the women for the greater part, but I believe not all, common prostitutes. They wander over the country much like Gypsies. Of the latter, which are called here غاجر Ghadjar (in Syria Korbat), very few families are found in Egypt; they are more numerous in Syria.

قيمة كل انسان ما يحسنه

The value of each man consists in what he does well.

مع الحسن يفعل It is here equivalent to ما يحسن. It is in this sense usually, but not always, applied to handiwork. The Syrians say ما يحسن ما بياحسن for meaning "I cannot (do it)," which the Egyptians express by ما يقدر 497.*

قكبة ما كنست بيتها كنست المسجد قال دي قكبة

A harlot did not sweep her own house, but cleaned out the mosque. A certain person said, "that harlot loves goodly works."

498.

الفاكبة ما تتوب و الماء في الزير ما يروب

A harlot does not repent; and water in a jar does not become sour milk.

زير a large jar in which the water is kept for every family's use. يروب is applied to milk when it turns sour. In Egypt, therefore, sour milk is called رأيب.

499.

قمر و زيت دا خراب بيت

Moonshine and oil, those are the ruin of a house.

To light the lamp while the moon shines is an extravagant expense that will ruin the family. قمر is often used instead of نور القمر

500.

قرد يبحرس ترمس قال انظر الحارس و المارس

A monkey watches (a field of) tormus. "Look," said one, "at the guard and the crop."

This alludes to a despicable person occupying a despicable office. المارس in the dialect of the peasants frequently is used instead of الزرع "the sown field." Tormus is the lupinus, a bean of bitter taste and but little esteemed. A person to whom a small compliment is given, shows his contempt of the gift by returning it and saying to the donor قزقز به ترمس "(buy and) chew some tormus with it."

Boiled tormus beans are sold in the morning at the bázár, and principally eaten by children without either salt or butter. The meal of this bean is used instead of soap by the poorer classes for washing their hands, and on this account it is very generally cultivated in Egypt.

501.

قالوا للعميان الزيت غالي قالوا دا شي مستغنين عنه

They said to some blind men, "oil is become dear."

They replied, "that is a thing with which we can dispense."

استغني means here (as observed in the explanation of Proverb 259) "not to be in want of." دا used instead of هذا 502.

قالوا الحمير الجباسة يوم القيامة يوم عظيم قالوا ما لبسنا برادع و لا اكلنا شعير

They said to the asses of the gypsum mill, "the day of resurrection is a terrible day!" "We have neither worn saddles nor eaten barley," they replied.

Those have most to dread punishment in the other world who lead a life of undeserved enjoyment in this. The idle asses kept merely for pleasure in Cairo have fine saddles, and are fed with plenty of barley or beans; while the hard-working ass goes with a bare back, and gets nothing to eat but straw. عظيم "great, wonderful, terrible." The gypsum or plaster used at Cairo is brought from the eastern mountain opposite to Helouan, a village on the bank of the Nile, about five hours distant to the south of Cairo. The whole desert is overspread in those mountains with loose gypsum, covered with a thin coat of sand. The gypsum is pulverised in the mills at Cairo.

503.

قال السمك البني ان لقيت احسن مني ما تاكثني

The fish binny said, "if thou canst find a better fish than myself do not eat me."

The binny is reckoned the finest tasted fish of the river Nile. This proverb is applied to fools whose vanity is such that they pride themselves on the circumstance which contributes to their misfortune, because it distinguishes them among their equals.

504.

قرعة و تصارب علي المشط

He is scabby-headed and quarrels about the comb.

On a person's disputing about a thing of which he does not stand in need.

505.

قراطيس علي قوم مغاليس

(Like) assignments upon paupers.

تمسكات or حجي used instead of قراطيس or اوراق or بوالس "titles, receipts, assignments, bills," &c.

506.*

قفل علي خرابه

A lock on a ruined place.

Said of unnecessary pains taken to preserve what is not worth keeping.

507.

قالت المغاربة لاهل مصر ليش ما تحبونا قالوا من الاخلاق الردية

The Moggrebyns said to the people of Cairo, "Why do not ye love us?" "On account of your ill-natured character," they replied.

This saying is applied to a person who expresses his surprise at not having any friends. The Moggrebyns form a colony of very wealthy merchants at Cairo, established in the quarters of Ghoorye and Fahamyn, who trade in the produce of their native country. They have the reputation of being ill-bred, surly, proud, and very obstinate, and are therefore disliked; although, with respect to probity, they bear a character superior to the Moslims of any other nation. The word of a Moggrebyn (كلمة مغربية) has become a proverbial saying in trade, but nobody ever mentions the word of a Syrian, a Hedjázi, or a Turk.

قالوا يا قسيس يردك الله شماس قال دي درجة لاسفل

They said, "O priest! may God make you a lay brother once more!" "That is a step downwards," he replied.

On foolish congratulations or wishes. In saying يردك الله a compliment is intended, meaning "God restore thee to thy prosperous state!" Thus they say يردك العافية or الله يردك شاب "God restore thee to health!" "God restore thee to youth!"

509.

قالوا ايش حال مريضكم قالوا بخير كان يبصق علي
الارض صار يبصق علي صدره

They asked, "How does your patient?" "Very well," they replied, "he used to spit upon the ground, now he spits upon his breast."

On the delusive consolations offered by medical attendants. A patient who cannot even throw his spittle upon the ground, must be, of course, in a state of extreme debility.

510.

قالوا للدجاجة كلي و لا تبعزي قالت ما اقدر اخلي عادتي

They said to the hen, "Eat, and do not scatter (the corn) about." "I cannot leave off my habits," she replied.

It is useless to instruct an inveterate scoundrel in morals. يبعز among the Egyptians means "to throw about," "to scatter;" it comes from the word بعز but differs in signification.

511.

قرووط ملتوت سدر في بركة صابون

(Like) a karmoot rubbed with seder in a tank of soap (water).

This is said of a person whom it is difficult to catch or find; one who eludes all search. قرووط kar- moot is a fish of the river Nile, without any scales, and of a very smooth skin. Seder (سدر) signifies the leaves of the nebek or seder tree, (rharnus lotus), which, being dried and pulverized, are used as soap by people of the poorest class in washing their hands, and by the richer classes in washing the dead bodies of their friends. ملتوت in the Egyptian dialect has the same sense as مدهون.

512.*

قال ايش مراد الاعمي قال قفّة قرون ان لم ينظر يناطح

It was asked, "What is the wish of the blind?"
"A basket full of horns," they replied, "if he does not see he may like butting."

The blind men of Cairo, especially those quartered in the mosques, are notorious for their very quarrelsome temper. The multitudes of blind men daily fed in the Mosque el Azhar have frequently committed violent outrages in fighting one with another.

513.

قالوا للديك ايش ابصرت في نومك قال يغربلوا

They asked the cock, "What hast thou seen in thy sleep?" "I saw people sifting (corn)," he replied.

514.*

قال يا ابي الذي يغسل يده ياكل معنا قال و لا انت ايضا

"Father," he said, "the person who washes his hand is he to eat with us?" "Neither he nor thou also," he replied.

On a person who, confident of obtaining some advantage for himself, endeavours to thwart others in their wishes, but finds at last that his own prospects have vanished. In the East, before a man begins to dine he always washes his hands, or at least the right hand, which alone is used at meals.

515.

قالوا للغار خذلك رطلين سكر و وصل دي الكتاب للقط
قال الاجرة طيبة لكن فيها مشقة

They said to the mouse, "Take these two pounds of sugar and carry this letter to the cat." "The fee is good enough," she replied, "but (the business) is tiresome."

"a letter." مكتوب often used in Egypt for كتاب

516.

قالوا للحمار ليش ما تشتّر قال ما ينطلي علي المكال

They asked the ass, "Why do not you ruminate?" "Conceit," he said, "never deludes me."

الاشترار "the chewing and ruminating of cows and camels." ما ينطلي علي المكال verbatim, "deceit cannot be gilt (or laid like gold leaf) over or upon me," "does not make me appear to myself better than I am." The expression هذا ما ينطلي علي is often used, and conveys the same meaning as "this can never enter my head," "I can have no idea of it," "I am not to be gilt over with this."

517.

قطع الغار بالزيت الحار ما هو كثير

To cut off the mice with hemp oil, is not too much expense.

Do not care for expense in freeing yourself from an enemy. The hemp oil mixed with arsenic is used as poison for mice.

518.

قال يا عبد اشتريتك قال هذا لك قال تهرب قال هذا لي

He said, "O slave, I have bought thee." "That is thy business," he replied. "Wilt thou run away?" "That is my business," he answered.

519.

قطعوها صحت للطنبورة

They cut it to pieces; it served well for (the covering of) the drum.

Commonly said of a broken or spoiled piece of any thing, which can, however, be still employed in some manner, so as not to be wholly useless.

520.

قالوا للديب. ما لك ورا هذه الغنيمات قال ترايهم ينفع للعوينات

They said to the wolf, "For what art thou following those poor little sheep?" He replied, "The dust (upon which they tread) is good for poor little eyes."

On the hypocritical professions of tyrants. The diminutive is often used not only because the object in question is really smaller or inferior in quantity or quality, but to give a kind of bonhomie to the expression; and in this sense the Bedouins especially use it on many occasions. Thus "poor little thing" might be applied in a kind and compassionate manner to a person by no means diminutive in stature or wanting money. عوينات is the diminutive or تصغير of عيون the eyes. ما لك is a common expression in Egypt, not implying "what is it to thee?" but, "what is the matter with thee?" "what dost thou want?" The Syrians say in the same sense ايش بك 521.

قالوا للبقر اذا متّم ما يكفّنوكم قالوا ليتهم يخلّوا جلودنا علينا

They asked the cows, "If you die, do they not put you into shrouds?" They replied, "Would to God they may leave our skins upon us!"

Instead of ليت the Egyptians more frequently say ريتهم يخلّوا and then it would stand ريت

522.

قال يا سيدي نحات قال يا راجل سيدك ياكله بقشرة

"My Lord," he said, "(I beg of you) the melon peels."

"Man," quoth he, "thy Lord eats the melon together with the melon peels."

نحات signifies a piece of melon peel. When a person eats melons in the bázár or before the coffee shops, he is always accosted by beggars, who ask for the peels, which they eat, as all the peasants do when hungry.

523.

قرد ضاف عفريت قالوا له مجردة يا ابن الشيخ

A monkey solicited hospitality from demons. "Young gentleman," they replied, "the house is quite empty of provisions."

It is in vain to ask charity from wretches. ضاف in the Egyptian dialect is the same as طَلَب الصيافة in opposition to يضيف which signifies "to grant hospitality." ابن الشيخ is a title given from mere politeness and equivalent to "gentleman," or "young gentleman." مجردة is to be understood as if preceded by الدار "the house from which every thing has been removed," or "which has remained empty of provisions."

524.

قد ضلَّ مَنْ كانت العميان تهديه

Verily he loses his way whom blind men guide.

A verse is cited which expresses the same meaning :—

إذا كان الغراب دليل قوم
يمروا بهم علي جيف الكلاب

*When crows are the guides of people,
They lead them to the carcasses of dogs.*

525.

قد تبالي المليحة بالطلاق

Even the handsome (woman) experiences the misfortune of divorce.

This is said in consolation of people's sufferings.

526.*

قد يتوقى السيف و هو مغمّد

Truly, the sword inspires dread even in its scabbard.

527.*

قلمه لا يعرف إلا بالشرّ

From his pen nothing flows but malice.

يرعف originally means "blood flowing out of the nose." The reproach conveyed in this proverb is more applicable to Western than to Eastern writers.

Oriental authors are distinguished for great gentleness towards each other ; paper wars seldom rage among them, and they render justice one to another perhaps in a strain of excessive panegyric ; and if they correct an error, it is with coolness and moderation. The total want of publications resembling our Reviews, and the fear of broaching new doctrines or opinions, contribute probably to this spirit of indulgence.

528.

القصاب لا تهوله كثرة الغنم

The butcher is not startled at the multiplicity of sheep.

A tyrant perpetrates bloody acts without compunction. يبول "to be afraid," or "amazed."

529.*

قبل السحاب اصابني الوكف

Before the clouds (appeared) the rain came upon me.

The accident happened quite unexpectedly. The term وكف for "rain," is no longer used at Cairo.

530.

اقبح من قول بلا فعل

(It is still) worse than a promise without performance.

قول a word, a saying, a promise.

 حرف الكاف

531.

كَبَّ و الله المسبَّب

Be diligent, and God will send profit.

يَكْبِبُ “to make small balls or pills;” this generally implies “to be diligently occupied,” “to work carefully.” الله المسبَّب “God is the first cause, the cause of causes.” This is often said in trade, and then means, “God is the cause of thy goods being sold, the cause of thy profits” (جعل له اسباب). The word اسباب in the Egyptian dialect, signifies “trade, buying and selling in general.” يتسبَّب “he trades.” رجل متسبب for “trader or merchant,” is more commonly used than رجل تاجر

532.

كانت من سواقي الجيزة وقعت اضراسها و قتلت مائة شب

As if she was one of the water-wheels of Djiyze, her back teeth fell out, and one hundred oxen were killed by her (with the work).

This saying is used in derision of old women. سواقي plural of ساقية a water-wheel. ضرس means the back teeth of a person, also the teeth of a water-wheel. شب is the Egyptian pronunciation of ساب "a young man;" the peasants also give this name to a strong ox—hence the pun which occurs in this place. If a water-wheel be half broken, the oxen that draw it are soon overworked and killed by excessive labour. The people of Djyze are the Bæotians of Egypt, they are despised for their stupidity and slovenly negligence, and often afford subject for ridicule.

533.

كل ما تشتهي نفسك و البس ما تلبس الناس

Eat whatever thou likest, but dress as others do.

Do whatever you like at home, but in public behave according to received usage.

534.

كلب ينبج ما يعض

A dog that barks does not bite.

535.*

كم خروف عند الشوا و كم كلب في المراح

How many sheep at the roaster's? and how many dogs in the sheepfold?

How many good people are sacrificed while the wicked enjoy their life in repose. الشوا the person who sells roasted meat in the bázár.

536.

كَفَّ مَعُوْدٌ بِالْاِخْذِ بَعِيْدٌ مَا يَعْطِي

A hand accustomed to take is far from giving.

بَعِيْدٌ اِنَّهُ يَعْطِي is here put for بَعِيْدٌ مَا يَعْطِي

537.

كَلَابُ الصَّيْدِ وَجُوْهُهُمْ مَخْرِبَشَةٌ

The hunting dogs have scratched faces.

The face of a milksop does not show any marks of labour or fatigue. مَخْرِبَشٌ in the Egyptian dialect "scratched."

538.

كَيْفَ مَا ضَرَبْتَ الْاَقْرَعَ يَسِيْلُ دَمُهُ

In whatever manner thou striketh a scabby-headed person (on the head), his blood will flow.

A man is easily wounded in his weak part.

539.

كَانَ سَنْدَالٌ فَصَارَ مَطْرَقَةً

He was an iron block or anvil, and then become a hammer.

The same meaning is also expressed by the phrase

مَضْرُوْبُ الْيَوْمِ ضَارِبٌ

Beaten—but to-day beater

540.

كسل ما يطعم عسل

The lazy is not fed on honey.

541.

كل من خبز الرعفة و لا تاكل من خبز المشاة

Eat of the bread made by a woman with a bleeding nose; but do not eat the bread of her who constantly reminds thee of having given it.

The dirtiest bread, made by a رعة, “a woman with a bleeding nose.” المشاة signifies a person who recounts his own good works, and reminds another of the favours he has conferred on him. In the East, there is no sort of insulting language which hurts the feelings so much as being reminded of favours conferred; probably because the people are conscious of their own ingratitude.

542.

كل راس مطاوية تحتها الف بلية

Under every down-hanging head dwell a thousand mischiefs.

This is said of persons who in company sit with downcast eyes and low-bent head, brooding all the while on evil designs. مطاوي in the Egyptian dialect signifies “bent downwards.”

543.*

كل من قال نار احترق فيه

Whoever cries "Fire," has he his mouth burnt?

Those who cry out most loudly have often the least reason to complain.

544.

كشكار دايـم و لا علامة مقطوعة

Coarse meal for ever, rather than fine flour at certain times only.

This proverb is founded upon the saying of Mohammed recorded in the Hadyth or Traditions :

خير العمال ادومها و ان قل

The best works are those which last, although they should not be of great importance.

كشكار is the "coarse meal used by peasants." علامة "the flour of meal." مقطوعة "cut off," "at intervals only."

545.

كل شاة معلقة من عرقوبها

Every sheep is suspended by its (own) heels.

In a future state, none will be made to suffer for the crimes of others. عرقوب is the sinew or tendon (of Achilles) by which butchers hang up the slaughtered sheep.

546.

كفي عني فساكي ما اريد بخورك

Let me only be excused from thy bad smells; I do not want thy perfumes.

A speech in the closet from a husband to his wife. Leave off thy rudeness, I require no civilities.

547.

كل ما ضربت له وتد علق ماخللة

As often as I strike a woted for him he hangs up (another) barley-sack.

No sooner is one business finished than he sets about another. Among Arab sheiks in the desert, as well as in the villages, it is customary that when guests arrive on horseback, each horse is attached by a chain on his legs to an iron spike driven for that purpose into the ground, either before the tent or in the court-yard of the house. This spike, about eight inches long, is called woted (تد) and every horseman carries one with him. As soon as the guest alights from his horse the master of the tent or house takes from him the barley-sack (مخللة) in which the horse receives his food, (and which the horseman likewise carries with him,) and hangs it upon a post or nail. From this his people take it in the evening and fill it with barley. In this proverb the master's servant complains, that as soon as he has driven one woted into the ground, another horseman arrives, whose barley-sack is hung up, and whose woted must likewise be driven into the ground.

548.*

كونوا اخوة و اتحاسبوا حساب التجار

Be brothers, and keep between you the accounts of merchants.

549.

كف جاه و لا وية مال

A handful of consideration rather than a woebe of riches.

Woebe (وية) is an Egyptian corn measure, of which six make an erdeb.

550.

كان يحلف بقطع يمينه صار يحلف بركة ماله

He was wont to swear "by the cutting off of his right hand!" He now swears "by the giving of his money to the poor!"

This is said of persons who having been poor acquire wealth and immediately assume the language of rich people. A low fellow without money, swears, "May my hand be cut off if—" (the amputation of the hand is a thief's punishment). The great and rich men swear, "I will give my whole estates or wealth to the poor if—."

551.

كل و اشرب و خلي الدنيا تخرب

Eat and drink, and let the world go to ruin.

552.

كل واحد في سوقه يبيع خروقه

Every one sells his rags in his own market.

Every one parades or displays his distinguishing qualities in his own circle of acquaintances.

553.

كرامة لقصرك نهدّ خصنا

For the sake of thy palace shall we demolish our hut?

الكُصّ is an Arab hut constructed of brushwood or reeds. قصر a stately building or palace. From its plural القصر which the peasants pronounce el oksor, we have formed Luxor, the temple of Thebes. كرامة (pronounced kormāly) does not mean in the usual sense "for my honour," or "to my honour," but merely "for my sake."

554.

كريم ما يستغني

The generous is never satisfied with riches.

He wants money that he may bestow it on others.

555.

كلنا بهذه العلة والطبيب الله

We are all (afflicted) with this disease; God is the physician.

Said in offering consolation to others.

556.

كل الهدية و اكسر الزبدية

Eat the present (sent to thee) and break the dish (in which it was brought).

The dish will otherwise remind you of the obligation. زبدية is a small basin of earthenware glazed on the inside; it is usual to serve up sweetmeats in dishes of this kind.

557.

كل ممنوع حلو

Every thing forbidden is sweet.

558.

كل انسان وهمّه

Every man—and his own care.

Every person has his share of trouble. وهمّه put instead of بهمّه 559.

كن يهودي تام و إلا فلا تلعب بالتوراة

Be a thorough Jew, or else do not play with the Old Testament.

Be sincerely attached to a religion however bad, rather than laugh at this, thy religion. التوراة the Books of Moses, which are respected by the Moslems as derived from heaven, but which they believe to have suffered by the interpolations of Jews and Christians, because the mission of Mohammed was, as they pretend, foretold in the original text.

كثرة تاكل اولادها

Like a cat that eats her own young ones.

Said of a mother who neglects her children.

561.*

كلام الليل يمحوه النهار

The day obliterates the word (or promise) of the night.

This verse was quoted in reply to Haroun el Rasheed by a beautiful woman who at night had promised that she would bestow her favours on him the next morning ; but when day appeared she declined the performance of her promise. It has thus become proverbial. A similar saying is more generally current at Cairo, expressing that "the promise of the night is rubbed with butter, which melts away when the day shines upon it."

كلام الليل مدهون بزبدة يطلع عليه النهار و يسيح

This means, that, when passion has ceased, we forget the promise made while it influenced us.

562.

كدنب الكمار لا يزيد و لا ينقص

Like the ass's tail, it never increases, and never diminishes.

Applied to one who remains constantly in the same condition. There is a popular notion, I know not whether founded on fact, that the tail of an ass never increases in length, but remains as it was when the animal was born, except as to the growth of hair. ذنب is used in Egypt for ذنب

563.

كالبرة تكسي الناس و هي عريانة

Like a needle that clothes people and is itself naked.

This alludes to persons under similar circumstances ; and is taken from that fine verse—

كست قيصرًا ثوب الجمال و تبعًا
وكسري و باتت وهي عارية الجسم

The same meaning is still more forcibly expressed in the following verse—

صرت كاني ذبالة نصبت تضي للناس وهي تحرق

*I have become like a wick placed in a lamp,
It affords light to the people while itself is burnt.*

564.*

كن ذكورًا اذا كنت كذوبًا

Be of good memory if you become a liar.

565.*

كالكمأة لا اصل ثابت و لا فرع نابت

Like the truffle, without any (known) origin, and not sending forth any branches.

كمأة is a species of truffle found in the deserts of Syria, (I believe not in Egypt,) which affords nourishment to many Bedouin families. Like the European truffles they produce no plant, nor is it known how they are propagated. The Arabs say that they are produced by thunder and lightning.

566.

كلام لين و ظلم بين

Soft words, but open injustice.

567.*

كم من يد ضعافا الكسب خرقا في الانفاق

How many a hand weak in gaining is prodigal in spending.

568.

الكلب ما ينبج في داره

The dog does not bark in his own house.

569.*

كل عبد ان جاع سرق و ان شبع فسق

Every slave when he is hungry steals, and when he is satiated, practises wickedness.

On the effects of poverty and wealth upon low-minded persons.

570.

كَالْعَنِينِ يَفْتَخِرُ بِزَبِّ أَبِيهِ

Like the impotent, who glories in the vigour of his father.

Applied to those who without any just personal pretensions assume airs in consequence of the merits of their ancestors. عَنِين signifies one naturally impotent. The ancient Arabs quoted on this subject the following fine verse—

أَنْ الْفَتَى مَنْ يَقُولُ هَا أَنَا ذَا
لَيْسَ الْفَتَى مَنْ يَقُولُ كَانَ أَبِي

He is the truly noble youth, who says "Behold, I am the man," not he who says "My father was."

What is above translated vigour, is in the original Arabic a term for which the Dictionary may be consulted.

حَرْفُ الْأَمِّ

571.

لَيْسَ الْخَبَرُ كَالْعَيَانِ

Hearsay is not like ocular testimony.

مَشَاهِدَةُ الْعَيُونِ is ocular evidence, equivalent to عَيَان

572.

لو ابصرت بختي دسته بالقدم

If thou wert to see my luck, thou wouldst trample it under foot.

Said by the unlucky.

573.

ليت الفاجل يهضم نفسه

Did but the radish digest its ownself!

Could we but rid ourselves of the person whom we have invited to be our assistant. It is commonly believed in the East that radishes eaten at or after meals facilitate the digestion of other food, although they themselves remain undigested in the stomach.

574.

لو فتش ابن ادم علي الخبز ما اكله

If a man were to inquire after (the dirty manner of making) bread, he would not eat it.

575.

لو يكون الفلاح من ذهب لكان بيضه من خشب

If the fellah were made of gold, certain parts of him would be of wood.

Although a low person may attain an exalted station, and however his manners may be improved, some remnants of his former meanness will always be conspicuous. Here may be quoted the following verse—

لقد كشف الأثرُ منك خلائقاً من اللوم كانت في غطاءٍ من الفقرِ

Riches have disclosed in thy character the bad qualities formerly concealed by thy poverty.

576.

لو اوقدت لك العشرة ما رايتم الآ ظلام

If I had lighted for thee the ten (fingers as candles) thou wouldst still regard them as if they were in darkness.

Said of one who forgets or never acknowledges the most signal services rendered to him.

577.

لو لا الكسورة ما كانت الفاخورة

Were it not for fractures there would be no pottery.

Misfortunes are not without some good consequences. كسورة in the Egyptian dialect for كسر

578.

لو أن رزقه في است الكلب اكاه

If his gain lay in the hinder (or filthiest) part of a dog he would eat it.

On a person descending to the vilest modes of obtaining profit.

579.

لو لا شالوني من تحته كنت قتلته

If they had not dragged me from under him, I should have killed him.

Said in ridicule of a bragging fellow.

580.

لو سكت فيه تكلمت استه

If his mouth were silent another part of him would speak.

Alluding to one who talked incessantly.

581.*

لو كان في الحداية خير ما فاتت الصيادين

If the falcon had been good for any thing, he would not have escaped the sportsman.

On a person indebted for safety to his insignificance or trifling character. In the Egyptian dialect الشئ الغولانة فاتني "such a thing has escaped me;" "I have not been able to lay hold of it."

582.*

لعن الله الحمام التي ابصرتني است من لا اشتجي انظر وجهه

Cursed be the bath that has shown to me the hinder part of him whose face (even) I should not like to see.

Accident has thrown us into the society of one whose very aspect is disagreeable to us.

. 583.

لحمها و لحمه ما ينضجوا في قدر

Her meat and his meat cannot be cooked together in the (same) pot.

Said of a husband and wife ill-suited to each other.
ينضج "the preparing of victuals." In this sense also يستوي is used by the Egyptians.

584.

لو كانت تمطر كانت غيـمـت

If it were to rain, clouds would have appeared.

585.*

للسبع ما حازت يده

To the lion belongs whatever his hand has seized.

586.*

لو لا الدموع احترقت الصلوع

Were it not for the tears the ribs would have been burnt.

Tears soothe the pangs of distress.

587.*

ليس الفرس بجـلـه و برقـه

The mare is not (to be valued) according to its housings and its ornaments in front.

جل the housings of a horse. The word برق is used to denote the ornaments of a horse's head and foreparts.

588.

ليس في سقر حيث لا ماء ولا شجار

(He is) not in hell where neither water nor trees (can be found).

A reply to those who bewail without reason the situation of another person. سقر is one of the upper regions in the Mohammedan hell.

589.

لو وقعت من السماء صفة ما سقطت إلا علي قفاه

If a blow were to fall from heaven it would not light upon anything but his neck.

Said of the unfortunate. (Respecting a blow on the neck among the Egyptians and Arabs, see No. 2.)

590.

لو اتجرت في الأكفان لما مات أحد

If I were to trade in winding-sheets, no one would die.

On a person unfortunate in commercial speculations.

591.*

ليس كل من سَوَّ وجهه قال انا حداد

Not every one whose face has been blackened can say "I am a blacksmith."

592.

لسان التجربة اصدق

The tongue of experience has most truth.

593.*

لو بلغ الرزق فاه لولاه قفاه

If the gain were to approach his mouth, he would turn his back to it.

Said of the negligent and indolent. قفا signifies not only the hinder part of the neck, but also the back.

594.

لا تمدن للمعالي يدا قصرت عن المعروف

A hand that has been short in rendering services to others, do not stretch it out in quest of high places.

The selfish person is unworthy of a high station. لا تمدن the final ن strengthens the imperative, and is called by the Arabs نون التاكيد. By المعروف is expressed "the rendering of kind services to others;" such good offices as every one feels it his duty to perform towards his fellow creatures. The term in this sense is very commonly used; thus تعمل معي معروف "will you be kind enough," whenever the services of a superior or inferior in rank are solicited.

لا يقرأ إلا آية العذاب و كتاب الصواعق

He reads nothing but the sentences of torments and the book of thunderbolts.

Said of a person who always frightens others with disastrous or portentous news. آية العذاب are those passages of the Koran which threaten the wicked with hell-torments. كتاب الصواعق alludes to a work written by Ibn Hadjar (ابن حجر) which has for its title "The burning Thunderbolts" الصواعق المحرقة—Ibn Hadjar is an author much esteemed among the Olemas of Cairo ; several of his works on the Hadyth or Tradition (especially his Annotations to Kastellany's Commentary on the Hadyth,) serve as guides in the lectures delivered at the Mosque el Azhar.

596.

لا يسقط من كفّه الخردلة

Not a single grain of mustard seed falls from his hands.

Said of the care with which a miller watches his property. Mustard seed is extremely small.

597.

لا تؤخر عمل اليوم لغد

Do not put off the work of this day till to-morrow.

يؤخر "to defer," "put back," &c.

598.*

لا تَأمَنُ الأميرَ إذا غَشَّكَ الوزيرُ

Do not trust the emîr if his vizîr cheat thee.

599.

لا تَلِدُ الحَيَّةُ إلَّا حَوِيَّةً

The serpent brings forth nothing but a little serpent.

600.

لا يَشْكُرُ اللهَ مَنْ لا يَشْكُرُ الناسَ

Who gives not thanks to men, gives not thanks to God.

601.*

لا تَسَاخِرْ بِكُوسِجٍ مَا لَمْ يَلْتَحِ

Do not ridicule the short and thin-bearded, as long as thou thyself art without a beard.

For كُوسِجٍ the Egyptians more frequently say . كُوسَةٌ In مَا لَمْ the ma stands for مَا or طُولُ مَا 602.*

لا يَفْزَعُ البَازِي مِنْ صِيَاحِ الكَرَكِيِّ

The hawk is not frightened by the cries of the crane.

It is not size that imparts courage or strength.
 البَازِي is a species of buzzard common in Egypt and Syria. الكَرَكِيُّ see No. 3.

603.

لا يجد في السما مصعدا و لا في الارض مقعدا

He finds no ascent to heaven and no seat on earth.

Said of one so perplexed and embarrassed that he knows not where to turn.

 حرف الميم

604.

من دق الباب سمع الجواب

Who knocks at the door will hear the answer.

605.

ما كل ما يعلم يقال

All that is known is not told.

606.

مصايب قوم عند قوم فوايد

The misfortunes of some people are advantages to others.

607.*

ما الحزينة الشكي كالنايكة بکراها

The afflicted mother who has lost her children is not like the woman who weeps for hire.

For نایكة the Egyptians now use the word ندابة to express those hired “pleureuses,” or mourners.

608.

ما يعرف في السماء الا سهيل

He does not know in the heavens any thing but Sirius.

He knows only the most conspicuous part of heaven. A saying applied to persons little versed in the details of business.

609.

ماجنون و عطي دستور

A fool—and free license was allowed.

The word دستور in Arabic has two significations. It means, as here, the liberty granted to a person who is high in favour to do whatever he pleases, a circumstance usually the case with Turkish governors' favourites. It is also used as an exclamation on entering the houses of strangers, and passing by the places occupied by women, that they may be warned to retire; it then is equivalent to “with your leave,” or “take care;” and in this sense it is frequently employed.

610.*

ما كل وجه يقال له مرحبا

Not to every face is said "Welcome."

In Egypt مرحبا implies "welcome." In the Hedjáz it means "you are welcome to it," or "I am ready for it," and is the usual reply given by servants when commanded to do any thing by their masters. In Egypt the servant says on that occasion حاضر "I am ready."

611.

ما للجنائزة حامية قال كل انسان يبكي علي حاله

*"Why is the funeral so hot?" One answered,
"Every person weeps for his own (unhappy) state."*

ما للجنائزة is here used in the same manner as ما لك (see No. 520,) and signifies "what is the matter with the funeral," &c. A burial or funeral is said to be حامية hot, or warm, when crowds of mourners attend it, crying loudly. The women on those occasions wave their handkerchiefs with both hands over their heads, and following the bier, sing the praises of the deceased, whom, whether male or female, they celebrate chiefly for beauty or finery:—"What a beautiful turban he had!" "What a lovely person she was!" "What a fine veil she wore!"

612.

ما يعرف حرّ الحمام إلا من دخلها

He alone knows the heat of the bath who has entered it.

613.

ما يضيع حق و خلفه مطالب

No right is lost which is followed up by demands.

614.

ما يبقي علي المداود إلا شر البقر

The bad cows only remain at the mangers.

Said of those who continue as burthens on their families or friends. The good cows are either sold or employed in the field. مداود is the plural of مدود "a manger."

615.

ما كل من نفخت طبخت

It is not every woman who blows (the fire) that cooks also.

It may likewise mean "not every woman who puffs herself up or assumes airs;" for the word ينفخ may be used figuratively in Arabic as in English.

616.

ما كل معوج الرقبة جمل

Every thing crooked-necked is not a camel.

617.

ما كل جني يدخل القنينة

It is not every spirit that enters the glass bottle.

We cannot persuade or compel every person to serve our purposes. Sorcerers who pretend to confine hostile or familiar spirits in a glass bottle (قنينة) are as well known in the East as in Europe.

618.

ما تم فولة مسوسة الا لها كيال اعور

No worm-eaten bean remains without finding a half-blind measurer.

Every bad thing finds something equally bad to match it. The word تم is frequently used in the sense here expressed, as تم قاعد "he remained sitting;" تم يشتم حتي "he continued railing or abusing until—"

619.

من حسن لفظها بعثوها تخطب

On account of her fine talking they sent her to woo (for a friend).

Said ironically of a woman who spoke in a mean or vulgar manner. بعث according to the Egyptian dialect for بعث 620.

من استاكي من بنت عمه ما خاب منها غلام

He who is bashful with his cousin, gets no boy by her.

This saying is often addressed to a friend whom we entreat to render us some service, or to pay a debt. If we are ashamed, or act bashfully with him, we obtain nothing from him. It is a general custom in the Levant to marry the first cousin, and here this name stands for "wife." Cousins thus married continue to call each other "cousins," even after the marriage, and not "husband and wife;" because the tie of first-cousinship is universally regarded as more sacred than that of matrimony, which may be, and is frequently, dissolved at the momentary caprice of either party. Thus the man calls his wife in the house يا بنت عمي "O daughter of my uncle;" and the wife says to her husband يا ابن عمي "O son of my uncle."

621.

شبه ديوک العرب یاکل خرا و یدن لله

He is like the cocks of the Bedouins, eating dung and calling to prayers gratis.

Said of one who is left, notwithstanding all his services, to live in poverty and contempt. The cock is likened to the muezzin, because he crows at the time of morning prayers when the muezzin calls the people to their devotions. یدن is the Egyptian pronunciation of یودن. The phrase "for God's sake," or "gratis," is expressed by لله. The Bedouins (here designated by the word Arab,) have no criers or muezzins but their cocks.

622.

ما صاحت البقرة إلا للقاضي

None got the cow but the kádhy.

The arbitrator himself seized upon the object of dispute. صَحَّ لَكَ is an expression frequently used, meaning "thou hast luckily gotten it," "it was exactly what thou shouldest have had," "it fell appropriately to thy lot." صَحَّ لَكَ (from the verb يَصَحُّ) originally signifies "it is perfect for thee."

623.

مَنْ يَكُونُ أُمُّهُ الْحَمَّى وَابُوهُ الْبَارِدَةُ مِنْ أَيْنِ نَجِيهِ الْعَافِيَةُ

To him whose mother is the hot fever, and whose father is the cold fever, from whence can health come?

Children suffer from the discordant tempers of their parents. نَجِيهِ in the Egyptian dialect for تَجِي لَهُ

624.

ما يخرج الزيت إلا المعصار

No one extracts the oil but the oil-presser.

To every sort of labour its own particular workman. المعصار is the person who works at the معصرة or oil-mill.

625.

مَنْ خَلَّفَ مَا مَاتَ

He who leaves (the fame of good or great works) after him, does not die.

626.

مكبة و جارية علي بجدید بسارية

A covered dish and a handmaid for a farthing's worth of sprats.

The construction is مكبة و جارية علي بسارية. بجدید the inversion is for the sake of the rhyme at the end. مكبة is the copper cover placed over the most choice dishes in setting them before the guests. The female slave is here supposed to bring one of those dishes into the room, a great honour conferred upon the company and upon the dish she carries, because female slaves attend only on extraordinary occasions. The small fishes called بسارية very much resemble sprats of from two to four inches long; they are found in the tanks and ponds of Egypt after the inundation subsides. In these ponds the fish of the Nile deposit their spawn; and when the river sinks, the fishermen stop up the communication between it and the ponds until the water becomes so shallow that they can take the young fry in immense quantities, by means of wicker baskets dragged along the bottom. In order to feed the young fish, or bisarye, they throw oil-cakes called bokma (بغممة) (made of the dregs of hemp oil,) into the ponds, and this fattens them in a short time. At present the government has declared the whole fishery a public concern, and lets it out to several companies. In November and December the bisarye form one of the principal dishes of the middling classes at Cairo, and one pennyworth of them is sufficient to satisfy a person. The original name of the bisarye, as I have heard, is رضاضي. Of the جديد (an ancient copper coin of Egypt) few now remain, they being no longer current; ten of them were equal to one para. The preposition علي is put here for لاجل and in this sense is often used; thus in the common question “for what?” or “what for?” علي اي stands for لاي سبب or لاي اجل

627.

ما بقي يعوز من النقل إلا الزعرور

He wants of dried fruits only the zarour.

Said of unreasonable demands. The بقي is here a superfluous particle, as already noticed. (See No. 263.) النقل are “dried fruits” (and النقلي “the seller of dried fruits”). Zarour is a small fruit resembling a cherry in size, and an apple in taste and colour. It grows upon a low thorny shrub in different parts of Syria, where I have seen it, especially in the Valley of the Jordan. I believe that it is not a native of Egypt, and it is rarely to be found in the shops of those Damascus people who sell dried fruits at Cairo.

ما قدر علي حماته قام لامراته

He was not a match for his mother-in-law—he then rose against his wife.

Finding the actual enemy too powerful, he attacks the weak and innocent. In the Egyptian dialect انا اقدر عليه signifies "I am quite a match (or an overmatch) for him." ما اقدر عليه "I am not a match for him." Instead of علي امراته we find لامراته—according to the practice before mentioned of putting the ل for علي—and vice versa.

629.

ما كفي الميت موته حتي عصره القبر

Death was not sufficient for the dead, the grave moreover must press upon him.

It is believed by Mohammedans that the tomb presses upon the body therein deposited either lightly or heavily according to the sins or merits of the deceased. This saying therefore means "not only was he punished for his sins by death, but the very tomb pressed upon him." Here حتي means "moreover," or "even,"—زيادة علي ذلك—having no reference to time. Thus it is said حتي ضربه شتمه "he abused him and even (or moreover) struck him."

630.

ما تتم الحيلة الا علي الشطار

The fraud is not complete unless it be practised upon clever and cunning persons.

It requires no ability to cheat the stupid. شطار is the plural of شاطر "able," "active," and also "knowing and expert in business."

631.

ما يدخل الدرهم الزغل إلا علي الصيرفي الركي

False coin is passed upon none but the shrewd banker.

The over-shrewd are most easily cheated. يدخل عليه "it enters upon him;" that is, "it is passed upon him." The money-changers (صيرفي) in Egypt are mostly Jews. In Syria, especially at Aleppo, these seyras, or bankers, are depositories of the cash of all the wealthy merchants. Each has in his shop a kind of Giro-bank, where sums of money are paid and received by his transferring them from one account book to another. This system much facilitates payments, and is conducted with sufficient security.

مثل العتال الميشوم ما يذكر الله إلا تحت الحمل

(He is) like the perverse porter who calls upon God only when he is under the load.

He never thinks of God but when he is suffering from misfortune. The porters are accustomed to exclaim at every step while they carry heavy burthens, "O God! O God!" يا الله يا الله A porter or the carrier of a load is called in Egypt عتال also شيال or جمال 633.

مَنْ تَحَبَّهُ مِنْ أَوْلَادِكَ قَالَ مَنْ يَدِي عَلَيَّ كَسْ أُمِّهِ

"Which dost thou most love of thy children?" "That one," he replied, "whose mother's conduct I most strictly watch."

The father loves most that child of whose mother's fidelity he does not entertain a doubt. It must be recollected that in consequence of a plurality of wives the children of different beds are often found in one man's house. The Arabic scholar will easily perceive that the latter part of this proverb would not decently bear a literal translation.

634.

مَا زَرْتَنِي وَ أَنْتَ جَارِي تَجِي مِنْ مِصْرَ عَلَيَّ سَمَارِي

*Thou didst not visit me, and thou art my neighbour,
(and) comest from Cairo upon my jackass.*

Said of a person deficient in polite attentions towards those who had a right to expect them from him.

635.

مَوْتَ الْمَرَاةِ تَجْدِيدُ الْعَرَسِ

The death of the wife is the renewal of the wedding.

Here is an allusion to the custom of taking a new wife immediately on the death of a former. So universally is this practised, that no blame whatever is attached to a man or woman who remarry—the former in the next fortnight, the latter after the stipulated term of forty days, from the death of their partners.

636.

مَنْ صَيَّرَ نَفْسَهُ خُحَالَةَ الْبَقَرِ

Him who makes chaff of himself, the cows will eat.

He who does not support his own dignity will be slighted and ill-treated. No Levantine will read this sentence without exclaiming "El hamdoo l' illahy!" "Thanks be to God! that is not my foible!"

637.

مَنْ غَابَ غَابَ نَصِيبُهُ

He who absents himself loses his share (or his share absents itself).

That thou mayst prosper, attend to thy task. نصيب "the lot bestowed by fate," also "a share or portion."

638.

مَزِينٌ فَتَحَ بِاقْرَعٍ اسْتَفْتَحَ

A barber opened (his shop)—the first person whom he shaved was scald-headed.

Said of business commenced inauspiciously. مَزِينٌ "a barber," the same as حلاق —after فَتَحَ is understood "he opened his shop." In the Egyptian dialect دكانه is for افْتَحَ "to begin with;" and the word is generally used by shopkeepers to express the first sale they make in the morning. Thus they say, "I sold it cheap to you, that I might begin (this day's sale) with a goodly work."

انا بعته لكم رخيص حتي استفتح بخير

639.

مفلس و مرابي ما اختلغوا

A bankrupt and an usurer do not disagree.

They easily conclude a bargain.

640.*

من طبخ شئ ردي ياكل منه

He who cooks a bad thing, eats of it.

The promoter or contriver of a bad affair suffers from it.

641.*

من هي عويشة في سوق الغزل

Who is Oweyshe in the market of the cotton-yarn?

A person great or famous in his own immediate neighbourhood, is lost when he enters the crowd upon the stage of this world. عويشة is a diminutive of عيشة a woman's name. The diminutive is often applied to the names of children who are favourites with their parents or acquaintances. Every morning, just after sunrise, the women of the lower classes at Cairo take the cotton-yarn, which they have spun at home, for sale to certain bázárs (سوق الغزل), where of course there are great crowds of women, and where Oweyshe, however eminent in her own quarter, is not distinguished from the others. The sale of this yarn is one of the few means by which females can earn an honest livelihood at Cairo, and an industrious woman may support herself by spinning.

مَنْ رَادَكَ رِيدَهُ وَ مَنْ طَلَبَ بَعْدَكَ زِيدَهُ

Who likes thee, like him; and who wishes thee at a distance, wish him at a still greater distance.

زيدہ literally "give him more." Here is to be understood طلب البعد زيدہ Of a similar meaning is the following proverbial saying :

مَنْ فَاتَكَ فُوتَهُ وَ لَا لَكَ بِمُلْقَاهُ حَاجَةٌ وَ مَنْ بَاعَكَ بِدِينَارٍ
بِيعَهُ بِبَيْضَةِ دُجَاجَةٍ

Who abandons thee, abandon him, for surely thou hast no occasion to meet him; and who sold thee for a dinâr, sell him for a hen's egg.

The Egyptians say راد and يريد in the same sense as يحب—thus, فُلَانٌ يَرِيدُنِي "such a one likes me," or "is fond of me."

643.

مَنْ لَا يَسْتَحِي يَعْمَلُ مَا يَشْتَهِي

He who is not ashamed does whatever he likes.

644.*

مَنْ عَاشَرَ قَوْمَ أَرْبَعُونَ صَبَاحَ صَارَ مِنْهُمْ

He who intimately frequents people for forty days, has become one of their number.

يوم is often used instead of صباح

645.

مَا يَصْعَبُ الْحَقُّ إِلَّا عَلَى الْإِثْمِ

Truth becomes disagreeable to the fool only.

646.

مَنْ أَكَلَ وَحْدَهُ غَضَّ وَحْدَهُ

He who eats alone, coughs alone.

The egotist or selfish miser is abandoned in his misfortunes. غَضَّ to cough with the throat crammed, or when one has been almost suffocated by something sticking in the windpipe. It is reckoned a shame in the East to eat alone, and those who do so are despised as misers.

647.

مَا هَذَا بَيْتَ الْفَرَسِ

This is not the bishop's square.

This is not the proper place for a person. A saying derived from the chess-board, where the square is called بَيْت or "house."

648.

ماشطة و تمشط بنتها

A hair dresser, and she combs (or dresses the hair of) her daughter.

This is said of good work, such as is executed by skilful artists when they work "con amore." ماشطة among the peasants signifies "a woman who earns her livelihood by combing and cleaning the long thick hair of the female villagers, which she afterwards plaits," an operation to which all the respectable Turkish women submit at least once in every week. This business is performed in towns at the baths by professional women called بلانة

649.

ما اكثر خطابي و ما اقل فراشي

How very great is the number of my wooers; but how small the quantity of my furniture.

A pretty girl, but too poor to obtain a husband. الفراش comprises the whole furniture—beds, sofas, kitchen utensils, china-ware, &c. which a wife brings to her husband, amounting often to a greater value than the price paid for the girl to her father. She retains, however, the property of this furniture, unless she demands a divorce, when the husband may claim it on her leaving his house.

650

ما حد يحقر روحه

Nobody considers himself as contemptible.

In the Egyptian dialect حد is used for أحد—and نفسه commonly for روحه

651.

من تكلم في ما لا يعنيه سمع ما لا يرضيه

He who talks about that which does not concern him, will hear something not pleasing to him.

652.*

ما علي الغلوب دروب

How many are the roads that lead not to the heart!

يا ما is here to be understood as ما

653.

ما في الفاخورة مثله

Among the pottery there is none like him.

He is distinguished only among his low companions.

654.

من لا يصل للعنقود يقول عليه حامض

He who cannot reach to the bunch of grapes, says of it, "It is sour."

655.

مَنْ تَصَدَّقَ بِالْخَالِ كَتَبَ لَهُ عَلَى الصَّرَاطِ الصَّرَاطُ

He who distributes bran in alms, for him it is written in the Book of Destiny that he is to receive a puff of wind upon the serát.

The serát is that narrow bridge by which the Moslims pass over the precipice of Hell towards the avenues of Paradise.

656.

مَنْ تَزَوَّجَ فِي سَوْقِ الطَّيْرِ كَانَ طَلَاقُهُ تَمَسُّوًا بِالْخَيْرِ

Of him who marries in the bird-market, the divorce will be (as quick as one can say) "good night."

Women of the lower class and of unchaste character sell pigeons and other birds in the different bázars of Cairo. Here is to be understood كان طلاقه تَمَسُّوًا بِالْخَيْرِ That a person went off in haste, is expressed thus, قال تَمَسُّوًا بِالْخَيْرِ وَ رَاحَ "he said 'good evening,' and went away." In the East on quitting a company it is not usual to make long adieus; a man says merely "good night," or "good morning," and immediately withdraws. The proverb may perhaps also mean, that if the person marries in the morning at the bird-market he will be divorced on the evening of the same day.

657.

مِنْ أَوَّلِ اللَّخْلِ دَرْدِي

From the beginning of the vinegar dregs were in it.

The affair was badly concerted from the first. دَرْدِي in the Egyptian dialect signifies "dregs or lees," the same as عَكَر

658.

مِثْلُ الدُّنْيَا مَا فِيهِ اِعْتِقَادٌ

(He is) like the world; no confidence is to be placed in him.

659.

مِثْلُ مَا تَعْمَلُ الشَّاةُ فِي الْقَرْصِ يَعْمَلُ الْقَرْصُ فِي جُلْدِهَا

As the sheep does with the acacia-pulse, the acacia-pulse does with the sheep's skin.

قَرْصٌ is the fruit of the mimosa called سَنْطَا or صَنْطَا consisting of a small pulse or pod resembling that of carobs. It contains several beans, and when fresh is excellent food for cattle; when dried it is used by the tanners in Upper Egypt and all the Bedouins of Arabia to tan sheep's skins.

660.

مَكْتُوبٌ عَلَيَّ وَرَقِ الْخِيَارِ مَنْ سَمِرَ اللَّيْلَ نَامَ النَّهَارَ

It is written upon the cucumber leaf, "He who watches during the night sleeps during the day."

He who passes the night in revelry is unfit for business during the day. "It is written upon the cucumber leaf," signifies that it is written where even the meanest people may read it, as cucumbers are very cheap and common in Egypt. الليل and النهار are here put for بالليل and بالنهار or في الليل. In this manner the Egyptians frequently dispense with the prepositions في and بي 661.

ما في جهنم مراوح

There are no fans in hell.

مراوح the plural of مروحة "a fan made of the chips of date-leaves."

662.

مَن فاته اللحم فلياكل من المرق

He who loses an opportunity of (eating) the meat, let him feed on the broth.

An Arabian story relates that the bird kombar (قنبر of the lark species,) once invited King Solomon to dine, and requested that all his courtiers might accompany him. The king inquired whether there was a sufficient supply of food for so large a company; and received in answer, that everything necessary had been provided. The guests arrived and seated themselves near the banks of a river; when dinner time approached the kombar came flying with a locust in his bill. Having eaten some of it himself, he threw the rest into the water, and addressed this proverb to his royal guest, advising him to satiate himself with the locust-broth. The wise monarch smiled, he and his attendants drank some of the water, thanked their host, and departed.

مَنْ كَلَّمَ الزَّطِّيَّ عَلَيَّ نَفْسَهُ يَخْطِي

He who talks with the Zotty commits a sin against himself.

Avoid the conversation of unmannerly persons. زَطِّي an Arabian tribe noted for the coarseness of their manners. I have heard at Cairo, (but cannot affirm as fact,) that a small tribe of Zotty is still established in some villages of Palestine.

664.*

مَا بَقِيَ بَعْدَ عَبَّادَانَ قَرْيَةً

After Abbádán no village remains (or exists).

This is said in derision of the praises which people so lavishly bestow upon their native places, even the most miserable hamlets. Abbádán (عَبَّادَانَ) was a place on the eastern bank of the Tigris, belonging to the district of Sowád. I am ignorant whether Abbádán exists at present or not; nor can I imagine why the Egyptians should have introduced it into one of their proverbial sayings. قَرْيَةً signifies a village in the modern dialect of Egypt.

665.

ما في المعدية واحد لله

There is not in the ferry boat any (gratis or) for God's sake.

There every person must pay his fare. لله is used in the same manner as the expression "for God's sake," i.e. gratis.

666.

ما يهمل عين ادم الا التراب

The dust alone can fill the eye of man.

Man continues to be ambitious or covetous until he is deposited in the dust. Common expressions are عينه ملان (for ملان عينه) "his eye is full," or "he possesses every object of his desire, he is satiated;" دا ما يهمل عينه "this does not fill his eye," or content him. This figurative sense is restored in the proverb to the real meaning of "to fill the eye." تراب here signifies تراب القبر the "dust of the grave." A saying of Mohammed resembling this proverb in sense is recorded as follows:—

لا يهمل جوف بن ادم الا التراب

667.*

من له راس عند الرؤاس ما ينام الليل

He who has a head at the sellers of sheep's heads, does not sleep at night.

The person whose fortune is intrusted to the hands of strangers, cannot enjoy repose. The poor at Cairo buy sheep's heads and for a trifle have them boiled in the bázár by persons who are not only cooks, but sellers of sheep's heads, and therefore called رءاس or in the Egyptian dialect رؤاس 668.

مَنْ لَا تَأْكُلُ فِي فَرْحِهِ كُلَّهُ فِي عَزَائِهِ

Of that person at whose wedding thou dost not eat, eat at the funeral.

Lose no opportunity of gaining from a stingy person. The more natural construction of this proverb would be

الَّذِي لَا تَأْكُلُهُ أَكْلًا فِي فَرْحِهِ كُلَّهُ فِي عَزَائِهِ

The word عزا means the first days of mourning after a person's death, generally spent by his relations in loud expressions of grief; sumptuous entertainments being given to the mourners. Instead of عزا the Egyptians say also مَيْتَم which is a corruption of مَاتَم 669.

مَنْ تَعَبَ اسْتَرَحَ

He who is fatigued shall repose (afterwards).

استريح is the expression used in inviting a person to sit down when he enters a room, as the Arabs say اجلس

670.

ما لي بقرة ولا قوم ساحر

I have no cows, nor do I set myself up as a sorcerer.

I have no money left to assist thee (or to supply the want of thy lost cow). اقوم "I rise" (to do or to be), "I suddenly begin to be."

671.

من لا يرضي بحكم موسى رضي بحكم فرعون

He who is not satisfied with the government of Moses, will be satisfied with the government of Pharaoh.

This saying has latterly been often quoted to express that those who did not like the Mamelouks, must now submit to the still more tyrannical government of Mohammed Aly. The construction is according to the vulgar dialect of Cairo, it should have been (more correctly)

من لم يرضي بحكم موسى يرضي بحكم فرعون

672.

ما هو الا نار المايجوس

It is nothing but the fire of the Magians.

Said to a person who highly values that which finally must hurt him. The Madjous, or Idolaters, adore the same element which burns them.

673.*

مَنْ لَا يَذُقُ اللَّحْمَ اعْجَبْتَهُ الرَّيَّةُ

He who does not taste the (best part of the) meat likes the lungs.

The poor must be content with that which the rich disdains. The lungs are eaten only by the poor. Instead of رِيَّة, the Egyptians more commonly use the term فِشَّة in speaking of lungs.

674.

مَنْ كَانَ طَبَّاحُهُ أَبُو جَعْرَانَ مَا عَسَى تَكُونُ الْأَلْوَانُ

Of him whose cook is a beetle, what may not be the dishes?

What can the work be if slovenly fools are employed to execute it? أَبُو جَعْرَانَ is the largest species of خَنْفَسَةٌ or scarabæus, and cited, like the latter, as an emblem of ugliness and filth. It is the same animal which the learned Arabians sometimes call جَعَلٌ 675.

مَنْ أَكَلَ لِلْمَلِكِ فَرَخَةً رَدَّهَا لَهُ بَقَرَةً

He who eats a hen of the sultan will return her to him a cow.

On the heavy fines imposed on those who embezzle the public money. أَكَلَ is constantly used to imply "the taking of illegal gain." Thus أَكَلَ مِنْي "he has cheated me;" أَكَلَ مِنَ الْفُلُوسِ "he has eaten (embezzled) some of the money." But it always supposes that the eater has betrayed at the same time the trust or confidence placed in him. Therefore it is not said of a shopkeeper who cheats his customer by overcharges اكل منه—but غشه “he cheated him;” but if my servant overcharges me in an account of my expenses, I say اكل مني “he has cheated me.”

من لا يصلحه الخير لا يصلحه الشر

Him whom goodness cannot mend, evil will not mend.

On such incorrigible persons as cannot be softened by kindness nor corrected by punishment. On this subject the following verse is cited:—

إذا كان الطباع طباع سوء فلا ادب يغيد ولا اديب

677.

من احب شي اكثر من ذكره

He who loves a thing often talks of it.

Literally “abounds in the mentioning of it.”

678.

من يقدر علي رد امس و تطيين عين الشمس

Who is able to restore (what was) yesterday, or to plaster over the rays of the sun?

One is as impossible as the other. This is generally said of any undertaking quite beyond the reach of human power. تطيين (from طين) to cover a wall or anything with mud, plaster, &c.

679.

من العجايب امش كحال

Among wonderful things is a sore-eyed person who is an oculist.

A man should first attend to his own defects. In Egypt those quacks are styled كحال who pretend to cure the eyes, for which purpose they usually employ a mixture of mineral or metallic substances, especially antimony, and from this they derive their name.

680.

ما المروء إلا بدرهميه

Man is only man by his money.

This vile saying is in opposition to the celebrated answer given to the great Arab chief, or King of Hyra, Noman Ibn Monzer, by his enemy and rival Dhamra Ibn Dhamra, whom Noman when he came into his presence reproached for the meanness of his look and the smallness of his person. The noble Bedouin replied, "Surely the worth of a man lies in two of his smallest parts—his heart and his tongue!"

انما المروء باصغريه قلبه ولسانه

Others affirm that this answer was given by the Arab Mady Kerb to the King of Persia.

681.

متي اتفرزنت يا بيدق

When wert thou changed into a queen, O pawn?

Said of low people suddenly elevated. This is taken from the chess board, when a pawn passes to queen (فرز). The ا of اتفرزنت is superfluous, and must be ascribed merely to the vulgar pronunciation. The ancient poet Abou Tamam has a similar expression :

فرزنتم سرعة ما اري يا بيدق

682.*

من اكل مرقۃ السلطان احترقت شفتاه و لو بعد حين

Of him who eats the sultán's broth, the lips will be scalded, should it be even at a very distant time.

On the dangers attending those who accept lucrative situations under Eastern rulers. The اكل is here in its true sense and implies "illegal eating," or "gain." من مرقۃ السلطان stands for مرقۃ السلطان. Thus it is said انا ياكل عيشه "I ate of his bread," as if من preceded عيشه or as a host says to his guest, كل اللحم "eat of the meat," for كل من اللحم

 حرف النون

683.

نواية تسند الحجرة

A small date-stone props up the water-jar.

Great princes often owe their security to the meanest of their subjects ; or, great concerns are supported by the most trifling circumstances. نواية is the diminutive of نوي That the large water-jars, which are of this form—may be kept in an upright position and well balanced, some small stones are often put under them.

684.

ناصر الاجمق عدوة

The adviser of the fool is (or becomes) his enemy.

The word اجمق is applied in Egypt not only to a fool, but also to an obstinate headstrong person.

685.

ناكوها سكتت عاتبوها تغنجت

They embraced her, she remained silent; they reproached her, then she assumed airs.

She dreads the reproach, but is not ashamed of the deed. تغنجت “to enjoy female society.” ينيك from غنچ which signifies “the twisting of the body and coy motions of a woman impatient of reproach.” The same word is often used to express similar motions produced by coquetry or voluptuousness, and the women of Cairo flatter themselves that their غنچ is superior to that of all other females in the Levant.

686.

نفخة الاسطبل

The blowing of the stable.

This is said on two occasions; first, when a person resembles a horse that issues from his stable in full vigour, snorts and breathes high, blows out at the nostrils, and strikes the ground with his hoofs, but soon after is found to be tired; secondly, it is applied to a person resembling the grooms of the stable, who puff themselves up and give themselves great airs, fellows noted in Egypt for their insolence.

687.

نار الحلفاء سريعة الانطفاء

The fire of reeds is of rapid extinction.

The passions of those who have no energy of character are easily subdued.

688.*

نشأ مع نوح في السفينة

He was born with Noah in the ark.

Of ancient origin, of long standing.

689.*

الإنسان عبد الإحسان

Man is the slave of beneficence.

Beneficent actions and kindnesses enslave a man to the generous.

690.

نزلت منه بوادي غير ذي زرع

I alighted (at his house) in a barren valley.

Said of an inhospitable mansion, in allusion to a passage of the Koran (Chapter xiv), wherein it is said

ربنا اني اسكنت من ذريتي بوادٍ غير ذي زرع

by which valley is understood the valley of Mekka. منه stands here for عنده or فيه—these prepositions being in common conversation frequently misused one for the other.

691.

النصح بين الملا تقريع

Advice given in the midst of a crowd is loathsome.

الملا the (place) filled (with people). تقريع in the Egyptian dialect "loathsomeness," "disgust," &c. This meaning is well expressed by an ancient poet, as follows :

و اذا وجدت علي الصديق شكوته سراً وفي المحافل اشكر

If I should find my friend in the wrong, I reproach him secretly; but in presence of company, I praise him.

692.

لناس بزمانهم اشبه منه بابائهم

People resemble still more the time in which they live, than they resemble their fathers. (Verbatim —Men, with their time, are more similar to it, than to their fathers.)

This proverb means, that the general state of society, its notions and manners, have more influence upon man than education or the example set by his parents. A maxim equally just as sagacious. It might have been expressed more precisely in Arabic thus—

شبه الناس بزمانهم اكثر من مشابيتهم لابائهم

693.

النَّاي في كَمِّي و الرِّيح في فَمِّي

The clarionet is in my sleeve and the breath in my mouth (ready for playing).

Used to express "I am completely ready for business." ناي is a sort of clarionet very common in the Levant.

694.

نظر الشَّحِيمِ الي الغريمِ المُغْلَسِ

(Like) the look of the miser at his bankrupt debtor.

حرف النَّاي

695.

هدايا الاحباب علي ورق السداب

The presents of our friends are (as dear to us as if they were) upon the leaves of rue.

It is well known that presents are frequently interchanged between friends in the East. A thing is generally presented wrapped in a handkerchief, or placed on the leaves of some fragrant herbs or flowers. سداب is the plant rue, a favourite among the Turks and Arabs, whose drawing-rooms often contain it in pots. It is likewise called سِنْدَاب.

Here we must understand كَانَهَا عَلِيَّ وَرَق

696.

هَارِبٌ وَ يَهْلِلُ

He is running away, yet shouts loudly.

Instead of endeavouring to facilitate his escape by silence, he attracts notice by crying with a loud voice. For يَهْلِلُ it is more usual to say يَصْرُخ 697.

هَاتِ الْيَوْمَ صُوفَ وَ خُذْ غَدًا نَعَاجَ

Give me wool to-day, and take sheep to-morrow.

Applicable to those who give small presents hoping to receive some more valuable in return. This is almost universally the case where a Levantine makes a present to an European.

698.

هَمَّتْهُ عَالِيَهُ وَ بَطْنُهُ خَالِيَهُ

He is high-minded, but empty-bellied.

699.*

هُوَ قَدْرُ الزَّرِّ وَ يَشْغَلُ السَّرَّ

It is not larger than a button, yet it annoys us.

The merest trifles may cause vexation and pain.

زر is a silk button which fastens the gown about the neck. السرّ means here "the innermost, the secret, the mind, the secret intention." يشغل السرّ "it distresses and occupies our inmost thoughts, it vexes us;" so this expression is frequently used. Of the same sense is يتعب السرّ We hear also سرّه مشغول or سرّه تعبّان "he is vexed." لا تتعب سرّي "do not vex me."

700.

هو طبل تحت كسا

Is this a drum hidden under the clothing?

The drum will be heard although it may be hidden. The question means, "Do you suppose that so awkward an attempt to conceal this mystery can hide it from the public?"

701.

هان المسك و انثر حتي يستعملوه البقر

Musk became so common and was scattered about, so that even the cows used it.

Said of a precious thing used by mean people; or of a distinguished personage connected with those unworthy of his acquaintance.

702.

هو وجهك يا حزينّة في الحلّي و الزينة

It is thy face, O woman in grief, when ornamented and attired.

A reproof to an ugly woman angry at her face and endeavouring to deck it with ornaments. This saying is applied to all vain attempts at concealing natural deformities or bad qualities. حلي means "the jewels or gold and silver ornaments of the head or neck." الزينة "whatever is used at a woman's toilette for the purpose of personal decoration;" such as the kohel for her eyes, the henna for her fingers, the perfume for her hair, &c.

703.

هي صنعة بعقاقير

Is this an art of drugs?

Is it as difficult as the profession of a druggist? This is said to imply that it is as a matter of which the knowledge may be easily acquired. عقاقير in the Egyptian dialect signifies all the different drugs, spices, simples, &c., which are found in druggists' shops, and which cannot well be distinguished one from another without much skill and patience.

704.*

هو سمّ ساعة

It is an hour's poison.

It is of a very destructive quality, causing almost immediate ruin.

705.

هي مَوْنَةٌ سَنَةً

Is this provision for a year?

Said in advising a person not to squander away his little stock of provisions, and to regulate his expenses.

706.*

هذا الميت لا يساوي البكا

This dead (person) is not worth the weeping.

707.

اهتك ستور الشك بالسؤال

Tear off the curtain of doubt by questions.

Doubt is here personified as a veil or curtain with which virgin truth or knowledge is covered. In its original sense هتك signifies to remove the veil of a woman so that her face may be exposed. Hence are derived the other significations, disgracing and violating, certain consequences in the East attending the removal of a woman's veil by force.

 حرف الواو

708.*

وصل القطار للجُميزة

The camels have reached the sycamore tree.

قطار is a line of camels walking one behind another, each being fastened by its halter to the tail of the one immediately before him. In the open country of Egypt large sycamore trees are frequently found by the side of public fountains (سبيل), under the shade of which travellers and cattle often repose.

709.*

وصل السكين للعظم

The knife has reached the bone.

The wound is deep.

710.

وقف الباب علي عقبه

The door has rested upon its hinges.

Everything has been placed in its proper situation.

711.

وقع الغاس في الراس

The axe has fallen upon the head.

The blow was well directed.

712.

وريفة و انبلت

A small leaf, and it was wetted.

A poor little creature, and overwhelmed by misfortune.

713.

واحد حلق لحيته و الثاني ينتف شعرة قالوا كل من هو
بشوته*One shaved his beard, a second plucked out his hairs ;
every one, they said, according to his own liking.*

The abridged phrase كل من هو بشوته is often used in the same sense as “de gustibus non est disputandum.” هو stands for كان—to express it clearly we should say, كل من كان فبهو بشوته. Respecting the true meaning of شعرة see No. 202. Whenever the word beard is mentioned in the same phrase with a term expressing some object dirty or contemptible, it always implies disrespect or ridicule towards the owner of the beard, this appendage so venerated among the Arabs. Indeed they carry their scruples respecting it to such a degree that when a person relates a story or sings a song in which occur the words dung, hogs, dogs, or other terms denoting what they regard as filthy or impure, he requests any of his auditors who may at that moment be in the act of touching his beard or moustaches, to remove his hand, which request proves that no offensive allusion was meant between the beard and the word which the speaker or singer was going to pronounce.

714.

واحد ينيك امراته و جارتہ اتعاجبت

A person embraces his wife; a female neighbour affects to look as if she herself were in the wife's place.

Said of a bystander who assumes the air of enjoying that which he had merely happened to witness. I have heard this proverb (which, as the Arabic scholar will perceive, is not very literally translated,) often quoted in respectable society. And there are many others still more indelicate, not inserted in this collection, although frequently used by the best-bred people, even in the presence of virtuous and most respectable women.

715.

وجه مليح و ياكل شيء قبيح

A fine face, but eats vile things.

Alluding to a person of good appearance who commits base actions.

716.

وجوه كَشَّة و قلوب غَشَّة

Sour faces and deceitful hearts.

كَشَّة in the Egyptian dialect, "a sour, morose, ill-natured countenance," than which nothing is more disliked in the East, where a man is forgiven for being a scoundrel, but not if he seems to despise or dislike scoundrels.

717.

وحش و يكش و يقعد في الوحش

Rude and morose, yet he sits in front (of the company).

He takes a place to which he is not entitled. I have before remarked that the Orientals dislike extremely a sour or morose countenance. وحش in the dialect of Egypt is seldom used to express savage or wild, but "rude in manners and appearance." يكش see No. 716. الوحش so pronounced by many persons for وحج It is to be understood في وحش المجلس 718.

وجهه يقطع الرزق

His face cuts off all gain.

His face is so disagreeable that no one likes to deal with him.

719.

وَدَّاهُ الْبَحْرَ وَ جَابَهُ عَطْشَان

He led him to the river, yet brought him back thirsty.

وَدَّى or يُوْدِي in the Egyptian dialect means "to carry, lead, transport, bring to." الْبَحْرُ for الْبَحْرُ or الْي بحر النيل

720.*

وَقَعَتْ مَنَارَةُ اسْكَندَرِيَّةٍ قَالَ اللهُ يَسْلَمُنَا مِنْ غِبَارِهَا

The Pharos of Alexandria has fallen down. "God save us," said they, "even from the very dust of it."

The fall of a great man is to be dreaded, even in its remote consequences or effects.

721.

وَاحِدٌ قَعْدَ يَتَمَتَّى طُلُوعَ الصَّبْحِ فَلَمَّا طَلَعَ الصَّبْحُ عَمِيَ

A person sat demanding as a favour from God the rise of morn—when morn arose, he became blind.

We have often to lament the accomplishment of our wishes; or when they are fulfilled we cannot enjoy them. This proverb is derived from the following verse—

فَكَانَ كَالْمَتَمَتِّي أَنْ يَرِي فَلَقًا
مِنْ الصَّبَاحِ فَلَمَّا أَنْ رَأَاهُ عَمِيَ

The verb قَعْدَ does not here exactly mean "he sat," but is employed as a kind of auxiliary, signifying nothing more than كَانَ—thus, اقْعَدْ سَاكِتَ "be silent," or "sit silent," said to a person whether sitting or standing. قَعَدَ يَكْهِنُنِي حَتَّى "he did speak to me until"—or rather "he continued speaking to me until"—إَنَا قَعَدْتُ أَحِبَّهُ زَمَان "I did love him for a long time," or "I continued loving him for a long time."

722.

أَوْهَي مِنْ بَيْتِ الْعَنْكَبُوتِ

More easy to be broken than the house of the spider.

This is taken from the Koran, where we read,

وَأَنْ أَوْهَنَ الْبُيُوتِ لِبَيْتِ الْعَنْكَبُوتِ

723.

وَاحِدٌ عَلِقَ ثَوْرٌ وَقَعَ قَالَ رَشُّوا عَلَيْهِ مَاءً قَالَ حَتَّى يَطْلُعَ شَيْءٌ نَرَشُّهُ عَلَيْهِ

A certain person tied an ox (to the water-wheel). The animal fell. "Sprinkle some water upon him," (said the man). "Let us first," replied one, "get some out of the well to sprinkle upon him."

Said in ridicule of foolish advisers. An ox is here supposed fastened to a wheel that draws up water from a well. عَلِقَ is the technical term used by peasants to express "he tied the ox (to the wheel)." حَتَّى يَطْلُعَ شَيْءٌ to be understood as حَتَّى يَطْلُعَ شَيْءٌ مَاءً مِنَ الْبَيْرِ 724.

لا تزيد المبة طني

Do not add more mud to the Mobella.

Do not make an evil worse, nor add fuel to the fire. المبة is a tank sunk into the ground above four feet, and from forty to fifty feet square ; it is walled up with stones and level with the surface of the ground : the floor is composed of unburnt mud bricks. In this tank the Egyptian peasants deposit their flax after it has been well dried in the sun. They then let in water and cover the wetted flax with heavy stones, leaving it in that condition until a sufficient state of maceration renders it fit for being worked. They find it necessary to keep this floor very clean, because the masses of clay would spoil the flax ; hence arises the proverb. The mobella is also called معطنة—and to prepare the flax in this manner يعطن 725.*

لا تقطع في كيس غيرك

Do not cut out of the purse of another.

Do not seize upon that which does not belong to thee. The people of Cairo say قَطَعْتُ فُولَان —meaning “I have unjustly or by force taken something away from such a one.” The word ضَرْبَة is used in the same sense; and they also say, لا تضرب في كيس غيرك 726.

لا عند ربك و لا عند استاذك

It is neither (to be found) with thy God nor with thy landholder.

It is in vain to ask for the thing, no one can give it to thee. The Egyptian peasants call the landholders or proprietors of their fields by the name of استاذ In towns those landlords are called ملتزم But at present this class does not exist in Egypt, as Mohammed Aly Pasha has sequestered all landed property of individuals, and obliged them to take from the fiscus what they formerly received as rents from their farmers.

727.

لا ارافقك و لا اوافئك و لا افارتك

I will not be thy friend, nor will I suit thee, nor will I leave thee.

This is said of a wearisome hanger-on, who knows that he is disliked, yet perseveringly obtrudes his presence upon his acquaintances. Persons of this description are numerous in the Levant. يرافق comes from رفيق a "companion," also a "friend." The proverb is derived from an old Arabian saying—

من البلية صديق يرافقك و لا يوافقك و لا يفارقتك

728.

لا بعينك رايت و لا بقلبك حميت

Neither with thine eye hast thou seen, nor with thy heart hast thou loved.

Applied to one who affects violent love for a person whom he has never seen unveiled.

729.

لا تعير الاحمق شي يحسب انه له

Lend not to the fool anything, else he may fancy that it belongs to himself.

730.

لا ربح ثوابه و لا خلاه لاصحابه

He gained no merit (by spending it liberally) nor did he leave it to the right owners.

He unjustly took (the money) from another, without rendering it profitable to himself or any one else. لا ربح ثوابه here is to be understood "he gained not the merit of having expended it in alms."

731.

لا يغرّك رخصه ترمي نصّه

Do not let its cheapness delude thee ; thou wilt (if thou purchase it) throw away half of it.

According to the Egyptian pronunciation نصّ is used for نصف although other words of the same form are correctly pronounced, such as خصف—وصف &c. —قصف—732.

لا تزال الحاجة الميشومة عند صاحبها حتي يجي من يشتريها

The bad stuff remains with its owner until (some fool) comes to buy it.

حاجة often means “a thing, some article of merchandise, some stuff,” &c.; it is frequently synonymous with شي—thus, حط الحاجة في الصندوق “put the thing into the chest.” (See Nos. 34 and 378.)

733.*

لا صلح إلا بعد عداوة

There is no peace until after enmity.

734.

لا تعيط في وجه الرزق يهرب

Do not cry out in the face of gain else it flies away.

This is quoted as advice to dealers, that they should behave civilly towards customers and not reject good offers harshly ; otherwise the goods may remain upon their hands.

735.*

لا مليح ولا نفاق ولا طيب اخلاق

Neither handsome, nor liberal, nor good-natured.

Said of a repulsive character. نفاق one who expends money liberally.

736.*

لا تعامل بطال ولا صاحب حمار

Have no dealings with the indolent, and none with the owner of the jackass.

The lazy will do nothing for thee ; and the owner of the jackass will purchase food for his beast with the profits which he ought to divide with thee. معاملة signifies "trade," "commercial or pecuniary concerns." لا تعامل is equivalent to لا تجعل بينك و بينه معاملة 737.

لا تقدم نحس تتعب في تاخير

Do not push forward a worthless fellow, else thou wilt be tired in putting him back again.

738.

لا تضرب الديب و لا تجوع الغنم

Do not beat the wolf, and do not cause hunger to the sheep.

Be kind and mild towards friends and enemies. This is the only maxim recommending universal charity that I have been able to discover among those current at Cairo.

739.

لا علي في الكتاب و لا فاطمة في المعلمة

(I have) neither an Aly in the reading school, nor a Fatme in the working school.

I am not encumbered with children and therefore ready for any vocation. The school كتاب is generally held in a mosque where little children learn to read the Korán. After four or five years they are sent to attend lectures in the mosque, where the Korán is explained, and their language and religion systematically taught, but little else. معلمة is the school where women instruct young girls in sewing and spinning. Among a thousand females at Cairo scarcely one can be found who knows how to read, and perhaps not more than twenty who know how to pray or possess the least notion of their religion. Even among the highest classes the education of the mind is totally neglected.

740.

لا تعطي المنجم في هذا فلوس

Do not give any money to the astrologer for this.

The expectations which the fortune-teller has excited in thy mind are ridiculous, and he is not entitled to any remuneration. منجم an astrologer. Sheikhs and olemas are found in every town of Egypt, who deceive the credulous by their pretended skill in fortune-telling.

741.*

لا للسيف و لا للصيف

(A person good) neither for the sword nor for the guest.

Cowardly and stingy.

 حرف اليا

742.*

يَحْتَمِل الدوا لمنفعته

We must bear the medicine on account of its usefulness.

743.

يركب بلاش و يغامز امرأة الرئيس

He gets his passage for nothing, and winks to the wife of the captain (of the ship).

He owes obligations to the captain, yet endeavours to seduce his wife. يركب here is to be understood المركب The word يغامز signifies "to wink at," or "make mutual signals of intelligence with another person." رئيس in the Egyptian dialect for رئيس

744.

يوجد في الاسقاط ما لا يوجد في الاسقاط

Among things thrown away is found (perhaps) that which is not found in the casket.

سقط a box in which jewels and golden ornaments are kept.

745.

يمرق من الزرد

He slips out through the coat of mail.

He is so full of wily tricks that he would contrive to slip away through the wire-work of a coat of mail. The word يمرق is seldom used in Egypt, but frequently in Syria, and in the Black country on the Nile, and in Hedjáz, where to express "be gone," (or the vulgar English "get out,") امرق is used; for which in Egypt the word اخرج is common.

746.

يعوم في شبر ماء

He swims in a span (depth) of water.

He is full of resources and knows how to avail himself of the smallest means.

747.

يحتاج الذهب للنخال

The gold wants bran.

The great want the assistance of the mean. Gold is cleaned with bran.

748.

يا مطعمين اهل برا و اهل جوا يشتهوه اقعدوا جنب الطريق و كلوه

O you who feed the people without while those within are (left) longing for it, sit down out of the way to eat it.

This is said in advice to those who make an ostentatious display of hospitality towards strangers, but leave their own family to starve. جوا in the Egyptian dialect "inside," "within." جنب الطريق "by the side of the road where travellers pass," viz., out of their way. Eat with your own people.

It is very usual in the Levant to eat before the gate of the house where travellers pass, and every stranger of respectable appearance is invariably requested to sit down and partake of the repast.

Even the poorest man while he is eating invites any one passing by to share his humble meal. It must be acknowledged that with respect to food, the Egyptians, and in general the Orientals of every class, are generous towards strangers as well as towards the poor. I have reason to believe that very few at Cairo suffer from hunger, at least they may be certain of getting food in some part of the town before sunset; and those who feel for their fellow creatures must be gratified on reflecting when they retire to sleep, that in this great capital there are few, if any, individuals who pass the night without thanking God for an evening meal, although poor-houses, hospitals, parish-rates, and public charitable institutions, are here unknown. This consideration counterbalances a number of disadvantages, and tends to reconcile us with the character of the inhabitants and their political condition. Beggars can easily obtain work if they like to be employed, and they neither suffer from the inclemency of seasons nor from want of lodgings; all the lower classes being from their infancy accustomed to go half-naked and to sleep upon the bare ground under the canopy of heaven.

But on the other hand, this facility of procuring food is a main cause of inactivity and indolence among the Egyptians, which would be carried still farther did not the extortions of government oblige them to work, merely that they might pay the land taxes. It is not the southern sun, as Montesquieu imagines, but the luxuriance of southern soil, and the abundance of provisions, that relax the exertions of the inhabitants and cause apathy. Where a man is almost certain of finding sufficient food, however coarse or simple, he is easily tempted to indulge in laziness. By the fertility of Egypt, Mesopotamia, and India, which yield their produce almost spontaneously, the people are lulled into indolence; while in neighbouring countries, of a temperature equally warm, as among the mountains of Yemen and Syria, where hard labour is necessary to ensure a good harvest, we find a race as superior in industry to the former, as the inhabitants of Northern Europe are to those of Spain or Italy.

يستقصي علي البشنين و من زرعه

He inquires about the Beshneen and the person who sowed it.

Everybody at Cairo knows the plant beshneen, and that it is not sown, but grows wild. “يستقصي” “to inquire,” is a verb of very common use. The beshneen is undoubtedly the lotus of the ancient Egyptians; at least its flower resembles exactly the lotus as it is represented on the walls of the Egyptian temples. The flower consists of four green-coloured outer leaves, and four of a violet or rose colour placed in the interstices of the others; these inclose the inner part, which consists of a double set of smaller white leaves one behind another, in the midst of which stands the yellow seed-vessel, about one inch and a half high. The whole flower when half opened is one of the most beautiful plants in Egypt, which is probably the reason why the natives call these plants "the brides of the Nile" عرايس النيل. It rests upon a stalk which is about three feet five inches long, covered externally with a green skin, under which lies a second skin of a fine violet colour, spotted with white. The children play with this stalk, the inside of which is fibrous, and use it as a pipe-tube by placing some lighted tobacco at the place where the seed-vessel stood, the smoke of this they draw through the stalk. In their hands it closely resembles the plant which is held by the Theban priests in the pictures that decorate their temples.

They likewise eat the yellow seed-vessel, of which the taste is not disagreeable, though rather insipid. The flower generally stands on the stalk from one foot to two feet above the surface of the water. When the flower opens completely the leaves form a horizontal disk, with the isolated seed-vessel in the midst, which bends down the stalk by its weight and swims upon the surface of the water for several days, until it is ingulphed. This plant grows at Cairo in the tank called Birket el Rotoli, near one of the northern suburbs, where I happened to reside. It is not found in Upper Egypt, I believe, but abounds in the Delta, and attains maturity at the time when the Nile reaches its full height. I saw it in great abundance, and in full flower, covering the whole inundated plain on the twelfth of October, 1815, near the ruins of Tmey, about twelve miles south-east from Mansoura, on the Damietta branch. “It dies when the water retires,” (يَمُوتُ لما يروح الماء) said my boatman to me.

It is therefore a fit emblem of life in all its vigour and luxuriance while it blossoms during the inundation, which is the certain cause and forerunner of plenty in Egypt. It is an emblem of death also, when quite open, as the flood then retires. Or it may be understood differently, (and I believe the Egyptians did understand it in both senses,) as indicating while in blossom that everything is covered with water, and nature, as it were, asleep; and indicating when in a state of decay that nature is restored to life, for soon after that period seeds are sown by the husbandmen—thus, inundation is life in one sense, and death in the other.

يَاكُلُ وَ يَنْبِينُ

He eats and sighs.

Said of those who, in good health and prosperous circumstances, complain of sickness or murmur at fortune. يَنْبِينُ is used by the Egyptians for يَأْنُ “to sigh, or exclaim Ah! Ah!”

751.

يَفْتُ عَلَي الدِّخَانِ

He resembles the bread on (seeing only) the smoke.

He is preparing for some expected good fortune without any certainty of its occurring. يَفْتُ “to break bread into small pieces,” (over which the broth is poured to make soup). The man, therefore, is said to resemble the bread in a plate when the smoke rises from the kitchen, supposing that broth is on the fire and expecting that it will be brought to him.

I happened one day in the Sinai mountains to alight at an Arab tent. Ayd, my old Bedouin guide, as soon as he had sipped his coffee, went out in search of two large stones; these he brought back to the tent, sat down, and placed them by his side. When I asked why he had done so, it appeared that his object was to use them in breaking the bones, for the sake of the marrow, of a sheep that was (as he expected) to be slaughtered in honour of us; yet he had never received the slightest intimation that such a circumstance was intended: all present began to laugh, but Ayd had not indulged a vain speculation, for soon after a copious repast of meat was placed before us.

يَتَعَلَّمُ الْحَاجِمَةُ فِي رُؤُسِ الْيَتَامَى

He learns cupping on the heads of orphans.

Cupping is generally applied in the East to the hind part of the head, just above the neck. Thus in some hospitals of Europe the young surgeons learn their art by practising upon the bodies of poor patients who come to be cured gratis.

753.

يتعلم البيطرة في حمير الاكراد

He is instructed in the blacksmith's or farrier's art (or horse-doctor's) by practising upon the asses of the Kurds.

This is in opposition to the proverb immediately preceding. I know not that asses are particularly esteemed by the Kurds, but this saying means that it is silly to undertake the shoeing or curing of those animals which are reckoned valuable by their owners without an adequate knowledge of the art.

754.

يوم لا هو لك لا تحسبه من عرك

A day that is not thine own, do not reckon it as of thy life.

لك "thine," "thy own." That day which thou dost not enjoy in perfect freedom ; which thou canst not pass according to thine own will.

755.

يمشي علي الحيط و يقول بالله اسلام

*He walks upon the highest part of the wall and says,
 "For safety we trust to God!"*

He demands or expects safety yet does an act which exposes him to danger. If security be thy object do not voluntarily run into the way of danger.

756.

ينزل رجل غراب يطلع خفّ جمل

He descends (like) the foot of a crow, and ascends (like) the hoof of a camel.

Said of an ill-bred person affecting refined manners. In eating with the assistance of one's fingers only out of the dish round which many guests are seated, it is necessary to observe several rules of good-breeding established among Arab gentlemen. One rule is, to take up small morsels at a time, and therefore to keep the fingers thrust into the dish as close together as circumstances will allow. This proverb is quoted in derision of an ill-bred person, whose hand, when it descends into the dish, appears very small to the company (as small as a crow's foot), but when withdrawn from the dish and ascending towards his mouth, incloses so large a piece within its grasp that it resembles the hoof of a camel.

يكذب علي الموتي و يكابر الاحياء

He tells lies of the dead and belies the living.

يكابر (from which is formed مكابرة) means in the Egyptian dialect, to affirm boldly and falsely in a person's face that he has done or said something of which he is innocent or ignorant; thus, تكابرني "dost thou belie me?" or rather "dost thou state of me that which is a falsehood?"

758.

يقنع من المعاصي بالتهم

He contents himself with (incurring) the suspicion of doing evil actions.

This is said of a person who does not actually commit bad actions, but constantly exposes himself to suspicion by conversing with abandoned women, associating with drunkards, men of infamous characters, &c. المعاصي means actions contrary to divine and human laws.

759.

يرمي بين الدب و عليقه

He causes enmity between the bear and his fodder.

He is such a mischief-maker that he sets at variance those who are most intimately united. يرمي "to throw," is often used in the sense above mentioned; as فولان رمي بيننا "such a person has caused mischief or enmity between us." رماني عند فولان "by calumny or false accusation he has caused such an one to become my enemy." The meddling mischief-maker bears at Cairo the appellation of نمام

760.

ياكل ما كان و يضيق المكان

He eats whatever is there and contracts (or makes narrow) the place of others.

Said of a low-mannered person assuming the privileges of high rank. This proverb supposes a vulgar ill-bred man, voracious at an entertainment, (while the great Arabs never are so,) and pretending nevertheless to the privilege of a distinguished personage in occupying with his body as much room as possible, and thereby causing other guests to be crowded in their straightened places. ياكل ما كان stands for ياكل كل ما كان حاضر It is usual to say لا تضيق عليّ "do not sit too close to me," or "let me have more room."

يـكـجـي زـمـان يـتـرـجـمـوا عـلـي فرعون

A time will come when they will solicit God's mercy for Pharaoh.

Times are so bad that even Pharaoh is regretted.

The Egyptians often mention this sovereign, and the Turks call the inhabitants of Egypt by the opprobrious name of اهل فرعون or the people of Pharaoh, meaning "impious." It is said of a man who has proved stubborn, malicious, or impious, تفرعن he has become like Pharaoh.

762.

يكدّ علي عياله و يمنّ علي جيرانه

He is niggardly towards his family, but beneficent towards strangers.

يكدّ in the Egyptian dialect signifies "to curtail the dues of people," principally with respect to food. يقلل علي الطعم (See No. 748.)

763.

يخرج من الشوك ورد

A rose issues from thorns.

A good son from worthless parents.

764.

يخري في ثيابه و يقعد في الصدر متكي

He defiles his clothes, and sits reclined in front of the company.

Of the same signification as No. 760.

The sitting rooms in Egypt are generally on such a plan as the following outlines represent :—

Entering the door we find a pavement b, upon which the servants stand attending the company ; here the pipes and water-pots are placed. The greater portion of the room is elevated in its floor, about one foot above the pavement, and occupies the space marked a, on which in summer fine mats, and in winter carpets are spread. On the three sides along the walls sofas are placed even with the floor, and having numerous cushions. The sofas and divan in front of the step, or at the bottom of the room, is called "el sader," or the "breast." The sofas on both sides are called "djonb," or the "side." The place of honour is this sader, and especially the corner marked +, which is on the right of a person advancing towards the sader, wherein the great man of the company invariably takes his seat, reclining upon the cushions, while the rest, according to their rank, are ranged along the sides, and sit upon their hams, without reclining upon the cushions behind them ; that is, if they wish to pay a compliment to the great man of the company. He therefore who takes his seat and reclines upon the sader, either is or affects to be a man of importance.

765.

يا مشغول بهم الناس همك لمين خلّيته

O thou who troublest thyself about the cares of others, to whom hast thou left thine own cares?

لمين in the Cairo pronunciation for لمّين

766.

يشتهي الحرب و يكره اللقاء

He longs for war, but dislikes the battle.

لعا the meeting (of the enemy) or battle.

767.*

يا سايلي عن طعامي الخبز راس الامور

O thou who askest me about my food, (know that) bread is the chief of all things.

Another verse of similar meaning is quoted—

القنبر قال للقيقي ما احلا التين علي الرّيق
قال له تادب يا قنبر ما بعد العيش مسخّر

These lines are pronounced at Cairo as follows—

El kōmbar kall lil kȳky

Ma ahlattyn arrȳky

Kalloo tāddeb yā kōmbar

Ma bād el aysh mokhabbar.

The kombar said to the kyky, "How sweet is a fig for breakfast!"

"Learn better manners, O kombar," he replied, "after bread nothing deserves notice."

The kombar and kyky are birds about as large as sparrows, and numerous in the vicinity of Cairo. علي الريق means that state of the stomach in the morning when nothing has been swallowed except spittle, when the person is still "upon his spittle," i.e. with an empty stomach. التين علي الريق means "a fig upon the empty stomach," or "a fig for breakfast." The Egyptians say يفق الريق "to breakfast," or "to eat a morsel immediately rising from bed;" which the Syrians express by يكسر الصفرة "to break the phlegm, or the bile, (by eating) or to breakfast." ما كسرت الصفرة "I have not yet breakfasted." The word مأخبر has here the sense which I have assigned to it in the above translation of the proverb; I believe it stands for يخبّر—as neither مأخبر nor مخبّر literally explained, convey in this place any true sense.

768.

يوم النصر ما فيه تعب

On the day of victory no fatigue is felt.

769.*

ينصح نصيح القط للغار و الشيطان للانسان

He gives advice such as the cat gives to the mouse, or the devil to man.

Alluding to insidious advice.

770.

يمني قصرًا و يهدم مصرًا

He builds a palace and ruins a city.

This proverb is often quoted in allusion to Mohammed Aly Pasha's passion for building palaces and villas. مصر not only means Egypt or Cairo, but is also a name applied to all cities of considerable size. Thus we read in the Mohammedan law that the Friday prayer should be performed only in a city (في مصر), in opposition to the open country, of which the inhabitants, as well as all travellers, are not required to make the particular prayer of noon on Fridays. The commentators explain this term مصر as relating to any town or city governed by an emir or chief, and under the jurisdiction of a kadhy, or some head of a tribunal of justice.

771.

يقدم رجلاً و يؤخر اخري

He advances one leg and draws back the other.

He wants decision and is unstable in all his actions.

772.

يَلْجِمُ الْفَارِ فِي بَيْتِهِ

The mouse is bridled in his house.

Said of a miser in whose house even the mouse has been bridled, lest it should be able to eat anything.

773.

يَا وَالِي لَا تَجُورِ الْوَلَايَةَ لَا تَدُومُ

O governor do not tyrannize—the dominion does not last for ever.

774.

يَسْبَحُ تَسْمِيحَ الْفَارِ سُبْحَانَ مَنْ خَلَقَنِي لِلْفَسَادِ

*He prays upon his rosary the prayer of the mouse,
"O most holy, who hast created me for vile doings."*

Said of base hypocrites who are constantly seen with rosaries in their hands. The word سُبْحَانَ is repeated during prayer thirty-three times in passing so many beads through the fingers, and expresses that God is free from all defects or faults, and most pure and holy.

775.

يلطم وجهي و يقول ليش هذا يبكي

He strikes my face, and says "Why does this man cry?"

On the unjust ruler, who expresses surprise at the complaints of his subjects. لاي شي for ليش 776.

يقول للشارق اسرق و لصاحب المنزل احفظ متاعك

He says to the thief, "Steal;" and to the house-owner, "Take care of thy goods."

Applied to double-dealers.

777.

يفتي علي الابرة و يبلع المدرة

He pronounces judgment upon a needle, and (at the same time) swallows a large pole.

He is rigid in judging the affairs of others, but commits flagrant peculation himself. يبلع is used like اكل to signify that a person devours property not his own nor confided to his care. مدرة signifies in Egypt the long pole with which sailors push on the vessels in shallow water.

778.

يَمِينِكَ مَا تَدْرِي عَنْ شِمَالِكَ

Thy right hand knows nothing of thy left hand.

Mohammed has taken this principle from the Scripture. One of his sayings is recorded which concludes with the following words—

رَجُلٌ تَصَدَّقُ بِصَدَقَةٍ فَلَمْ تَعْلَمْ شِمَالُهُ مَا أَنْفَقَتْ يَمِينُهُ

A man distributes alms, and his left hand does not know what his right hand dispenses.

779.

يَدْلُلُ الْعَبْدَ وَ يَضْرِبُهُ

He spoils the slave and then beats him.

Said of those who spoil their inferiors or their children, and then punish them for what their own folly has caused. دَلَّ in the Egyptian dialect “to spoil (a child) by too much indulgence;” for يَدْلُلُ we often hear يَدْلَعُ

780.

يَاكُلُ وَ يَتَنَقَّرُ

He eats and (at the same time) mocks (at what he eats).

Instead of thanking, he ridicules the host. يَتَنَقَّرُ is a low word of the Egyptian dialect synonymous with يَتَسَخَّرُ 781.

يوم في العافية كثير

One day in (perfect) health is much.

العافية is the most common salutation which one receives on the road from peasants ; they pronounce it "Howáfye." The reply is الله يعافيك

782.

يري الشاهد ما لا يري الغائب

The eye-witness observes what the absent does not see.

THE END.
